CANADIAN TIMBERS.

Eighty Native Trees to be Represented at the Paris Exhibition.

James Macoun, of the Canadian Geological Survey, has been intrusted with the task of preparing the forestry display of the Dominion of Canada at the Paris Exposition of 1900.

When interviewed he stated that since a special forestry building had been provided by the Exposition commissioners, the display of Canadian woods would necessarily be separate from the main body of Canada's exhibit. In the forestry building Canada has been originally allotted a small space, but on its being represented to the French Government that Canada was one of the two or three great timber-producing countries of the world, the space was increased to 1,000 square feet which Mr. Macoun regards as still inadequate for a full presentation of Canada's forest wealth. The spaces allotted to the other nations are not known; the Canadian exhibit will adjoin that of Great Britain, which has 1,000 square feet, and the United States, Great Britain has but nine native trees of commercial value, whereas Canada has upwards of 80. Canada is to be represented as a nation by itself, and not as an adjunct to Great Britain.

An important feature of Canada's display will be a collection of 80 native trees of commercial value timber. This, of course, does not include domestic fruit trees, the wild cherry, the wood of which is "rarely the most valuable sylvan product Canada possesses, will be represented. A collection of 100 photographs specimens of commercial timber in every form, from the section of a saw log to semi-manufactured products such as hubs, spokes, and deals, will be on view. Square timber will be on display, and equipment capacity from locomotives and car shops is being severely taxed.

We would, therefore, urge upon all farmers sowing wheat this autumn, the importance of treating their seed by hand or otherwise of the simple methods which have been tried and successful by the Experimental Farm.

Another matter that was also discussed was the best way of getting rid of the pea bug, which is doing a great deal of damage to the crop. The only action taken so far was the passing of the following resolution: "That experience has shown that the only way to exterminate the pea bug is to discontinue growing peas, for two years." The section of the Board of Trade therefore urges upon farmers who have this year been troubled with the pea bug, the importance of not growing peas for a year or two."

Iron to Advance Again.

From Philadelphia comes the news that the entire iron trade is threatened with another advance in price early next month, as a result of the completion of the anticipated heavy requirements for the coming twelve months. The demand for mill and furnace products continues to be in excess of production. Large purchases of steel and iron have been made, particularly in advance of the 1000 delivery. Bills are at $39 at mill and product oversold for months. Open hearth is moving from $44 towards $50. Forge pig inquiries call for 100,000 tons. Demand for steel has assumed such proportions that fances are to be had at $100 per ton. Iron will have to go over for want of material. Railroad requirements are the most serious matters at present, and equipment capacity from locomotives and car shops is being severely taxed.

Late News Items.

William H. Tighe, a prominent grain and commission merchant of Chatham, Ont., has been missing since Thursday last.

The chief of the Ottawa police force has recommended to the Police Commissioners that they purchase an automobile patrol wagon.

Burglars entered L. Martin's hotel, Catarquini, near Kingston, Ont., and he was asleep stole from his chamber a sum of gold worth $100.

The privilege of exporting deer, accorded to foreign hunters under license in Canada, has been extended so as to permit the exportation of deer raised or bred upon lands owned or held by a company or association of persons of which he (the exporter) is a member.

The coroner's inquest on the death of Lyall Stephens, of Chatham, Ont., who was shot by William Houston on August 14, at Erie Beach, has resulted in a verdict that Stephens died from shock and acute peritonitis, as a result of the shot, holding that Houston did not fire at Stephens, but that he handled his weapon in a reckless and callous manner.

PETITION OF RIGHT.

Michigan Lumbermen Claim the Manufacturing Clause in the Ontario Law is Unconstitutional and Claim Damages from the Province.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Now that the law holidays are about over, Osgoode Hall is becoming more active, and the chances are that the justice mill will be going at full head within the coming week.

Among the cases to enter during the holidays was a Petition of Right on behalf of certain owners of lumber licenses, asking that the manufacturing clause in the lumber laws be declared unconstitutional, as being of unconstitutional character.

The Attorney-General of the Province at first said that the Petition of Right to be filed on condition of the applicants waiving any claim for damages. Later on he said that the Petition of Right would be filed, but that the applicants, who are claimed, and if the case comes up to the Crown, must pay the damages.

The lumbermen, who are parties in Michigan interested in mills that formerly cut and planed logs in that state, and the Canadian lumbermen, who are also interested in certain mills that exported lumber, the parties interested in having the case out of the Province, have joined in supporting the Petition of Right.

Mrs. Blair Was Killed.

Exeter, Ont., Aug. 20.—Mrs. William Blair, a lady between 50 and 60 years of age, while crossing the G. T. R. track yesterday accidentally fell in front of the train, and was run over by a locomotive, which was moving it, severing the head from the body and crushing the arms in a most frightful manner. The accident was witnessed by several persons. Her son called to have the train stop, but she did not seem to hear him. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her untimely death.

That the millers and grain dealers composing the grain section of the Board of Trade view with grave concern the appearance of smut in some of the new crop fall wheat, and hence have greatly surprised to learn that the pest could easily be exterminated. After discussion, the following resolution was passed:

That the millers and grain dealers

TRAGEDY AT GILBERT PLAINS

Fred Johnson, Farmer, Kills His Wife and Three Children.

He Then Killed Himself—The Murderer Was a Man of Low Spirits and Lately Spoke of Ending His Life—Parties Came from Eramosa—Tragedy Made a Sensation at Guelph Where Johnson Was Known.

Winnipeg, Aug. 20.—One of the most horrible tragedies in Manitoba's history was committed at Gilbert Plains on Saturday. Frederick Johnson, the murderer, was more prosperous than the average run of farmers, but low spirited. Lately he spoke of ending his life.

Johnson, 38 years old, Esmond, the third son, McRae, lived with the family.

After dinner Johnson got all parties but the wife and family from the house.

To do the deed a single-barrel breach-loading gun was used. Johnson shot his wife in the head and then his three children.

His first killed, Blanche, her bay horse 3-day-old, bled to death.

Johnson then shot his wife again.

He then killed his wife again.

Johnson then killed his

THAT FIRST SIN.

FIGURES to Show That Adam and Eve Ate Eight Million Apples.

Probably our great ancestor, Adam, little thought of the trouble he would incur posterity by eating an apple now that the question as to how many apples he really did eat is a new difficulty.

How many apples did Adam and Eve eat? Was it one or was it millions? When the subject was first mooted the editor very naturally replied, "Why, one, of course."

"No," said the assistant editor, "Eve ate one, and Adam ate one, too; that's two."

Then the subscriber passed along a slip of paper on which was written, "Eve ate one and Adam ate 102."

But the poet, who is a man of imagination, capped this with, "Eve ate 81 and Adam 812."

Then the publisher tried his hand, and his contribution was, "Eve 814 see how it tasted, and Adam 812, equals 8,954."

But the poet, who is a man of imagination, surpassed us much as he hates barbers, came up to the scratch again with, "Eve 812 see how it tasted, and Adam 812, 242 keep her company—82,384."

Then the humorist, who had been listening, quietly handed in his contribution, "Eve 812 see how it tasted, and Adam 812, 210-der a husband was he to see her eat alone. This equals 8,132,362."

"But he had another object," said the poet, "Eve 812 satisfied her curiosity, and Adam 8,124,382 Eve in his position. That makes 8,132,382."—Philadelphia Record.

That Second Chapter.

The new pastor was preaching his first sermon, in the middle of it he stopped abruptly and asked:

"How many of you have read the Bible?"

Fifty heads went up.

"Good," said the pastor, "Now, how many of you have read the second chapter of Jude?"

Twenty-five hands went up.

A wan smile overspread the divine's face.

"That's also good; but when you go home read that chapter again, and you will doubtless learn something to your interest."

There is only one chapter in the book of Jude.—Guthrie (O. T.) Leader.

Sound Transmission.

Water is a very good transmitter of sound. A scientist of the name of Calleau made some experiments with Lake Geneva, Switzerland, to demonstrate the power of sound to travel a long way in water. A clock was made to strike under the water and was heard to a distance of 12 miles. In a second experiment the striking of a clock was heard to a distance of 27 miles.

Central Canada Exhibition.

That the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa, commencing September 11, will surpass any fair yet given in America is assured. The entries are more numerous than ever before, the number of exhibitors is greater, and the applied for space in the main hall and carriage and machinery buildings is almost double that of any previous year, and an exceptionally fine list of special attractions has been secured.

The specialties include the following: The famous "flying" elephant of the Zoological Society of Canada, the trained elephant by Miss Ida Leroy, who is from a cannon when whorls of feet in the air bounding wire feasts by the renowned Parisian Cadieux; sensational acts by the Lundgrens, Lamotte and Josselin families, aeronauts; sword contests; the famous "solo" for the champion all-round fencer of America, St. S. S. Damoth, champion of the Governor-General's medal, for mounted competition at the Toronto fair last year; and Andrew Randolph, the champion of the world, who has defeated the leading fencers in Europe; log rolling competitions by expert rivermen, on the lake in front of the grand stand; scores of laughable water scenes by noted aquatic artists; the popular "flying" ride by the Royal Canadian Dragoons; acrobatic acts by the renowned comedians, Ranza and Arno; Comar, who performs a marvellous revolving horizontal bat act and does some amazing acrobatic acts; the famous "flying" Arab acrobat with his recently imported troupe of Toozozin Arab, all noted for strength and agility; the celebrated Streator Zouaves, champion fire drill team and wall scalers of the world; the famous "flying" team of Paris Exposition next year; two hundred paintings by the leading artists of Canada; exhibits from the Experimental Farm and from the Northwest and Manitoba; beautiful electric light effects in Horticultural Hall.

All the platform specialties and the musical ride will be put on during the evening entertainments, and the grand grand finale will be the "Bombardment of Pekin," in which hundreds of soldiers take part, and the programme each day to end with a magnificent display of fireworks—over sixty numbers—ignited on the lake.

Like to be Kicked.

Hall Caine confesses that he likes to be kicked, as long as this is done in public and makes him conspicuous or notorious. He says in the London Mail: "Even the silliest personal reference I ever see, however inspired by pality feelings, seems to me by implication a tribute and compliment, being a recognition of the fact that I am a factor worth counting with an adversary worth fighting. And when the most false, the most mean and the most treacherous of the kind has ceased to appear I shall know that I am no longer of the least account."

A Cold Night in China.

One of the facts that we inefaceably cut into my memory during my first winter in Newchwang was the finding on one morning about New Year's time 85 masses of ice, each mass having been a living man at 10 o'clock the preceding night.

The thermometer was a good bit below zero (F.). The men had just left the opium den, where they had been enjoying themselves. The keen air sent them to sleep, and they never wakened.

Weak and Nervous.

THE CONDITION OF A YOUNG LADY OF WELLAND.

SUBJECT TO FREQUENT HEADACHES, WAS PALE AND EMACIATED AND GREW SO ILL SHE COULD BARELY WALK.

Miss Hattie Archer, of Welland, an estimable young lady, whose acquaintance extends among a large number of citizens of the town, has the following to say regarding the virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the People:—"I was nervous, debilitated. At this time the least exertion caused great fatigue. My appetite was poor and I was attacked with gouty pains in my joints. I could barely walk through the house. I was very pale and emaciated and finally became entirely incapacitated. Various medicines were tried to bring me back to health, but I was treated by one of the best physicians of the town. One said my blood was poor and watery. I followed his advice for some time but did not improve. Then the second doctor was called and he said my blood was good, but I was still debilitated. He prescribed his medicines without benefit, I gave up and discontinued of ever getting well. My grandmother had been reading at that time much of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and pursued this line of treatment. To me, January, 1888. From the first the results were really marvelous, being far beyond my friends' expectation. After taking five boxes I can stand more fatigue than I could for two years. I have gained weight, I sleep well and am much more cheerful, healthy and strong. I would further say that the change is wholly due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I hope that my testimony will prove beneficial to other girls similarly afflicted."

It is known that there is a disease that the trophic is the regular recurrence of migratory swarms of fish of very small size that return in huge numbers after year with such absolute regularity that they are known as "salmons." NEWS OF THE LAKES.

The Nicholls carried lumber to Oswego.

The schooner Mary carried lumber to Oswego this week.

The schooner Eliza White cleared for Charlotte in light trim.

The schooner Monitor took a cargo of lumber to Buffalo.

The steaming light at Battle Island is temporarily out of repair, and a fixed white light is shown at this point at present.

The steam barge Seguin arrived in the harbor yesterday and anchored while waiting for the D. D. Calvin to unload at the ore dock.

The steamer W. V. Emory and Two Brothers took ties to Charlotte. W. V. Emory and Two Brothers took ties to Fairhaven. The schooner Annandale took ties to Charlotte.

Vesselmen are amazed at the phenomenal activity in the lumber trade. The timber business is good, and considering the improved facilities for handling cargoes, the earnings of the vessels were never so great as now.

The steam barge Calvin, with 700 tons of iron ore, and her consort the Ceylon, with 1,527 tons, arrived from Presque Isle after unloading at the ore dock, cleared in light trim for Cleveland, Ohio.

The steamer Sir Leonard Tilley was burned to the water's edge on Lake Erie last week. The fire caught in the engine room, and the spread of the flames was so rapid the engineers did not have time to stop the machinery. The crew and passengers were all saved, being taken aboard the schooner Merritt, which the Tilley had in tow. The wheel of the Tilley was dashed, and she continued to run in a circle for about an hour before the fire was extinguished. The steamer was valued at $50,000, fully insured.

Some faint idea of what was accomplished by the German wrecking crew, who succeeded in floating the great American liner Paris off the Marmaces, on the coast of Cornwall, will be realized when it is stated that more than 100,000 cubic feet of iron were torn away under water. On account of the danger of permanently damaging the vessel only small blasts could be made, and as each chunk of rock was loosed bawlers were made fast to them by divers and steamers dragged them to the surface. The work of the crew was when they were ready to blow away the last piece upon which the steamer was resting. The pumps on the Paris would not work and it was necessary to resort to the powerful pumps of the Berthilde, one of the wrecking steamers which sucked out the water at the rate of 4,500 tons an hour.

High Commission to Meet.
Montreal, Aug. 20.—The Herald's resident correspondent in Washington sends the following: A member of Congress authorized in the most positive manner yesterday the statement that a virtual understanding had been reached between the U.S. government, the administration and the Canadian members of the joint high commission, and that the meetings of the body will be renewed in November.

Two Little Girls Drowned.
Smith Falls, Ont., Aug. 20.—Yesterday afternoon Annie Menagh, daughter of Robert Menagh, and Sophie Gallipeau, daughter of Charles Gallipeau, two small girls of about 10 years of age, had gone in bathing, together with two other girls, in the Rideau River, and, getting beyond their depth, were both drowned.

A Sure Winner.
A buzzard had just been freshly killed and was about to bear it away to a tree top to be eaten at leisure, was addressed by a fox who came running up with:

"Ah, now, but I mistook you for the eagle and wanted a word with you."

The buzzard was flattered and offered to reward the head of the hare. As she did so the wolf came up and observed:

"Well, well, but who ever saw the buzzard looking so fierce and so proud as today?" Really, now, but I took you for a condor."

That satisfied the buzzard again, and to show her gratitude will she divide the body of the hare with the wolf. She had said that she must be off, when the jackal came trouting up and exclaimed:

"Upon my word, but I must have lost in my eyes. I was sure that my friend here was the ostrich, and I was going to ask her for a feather. Mrs. Buzzard, my compliments!"

The buzzard grinned and giggled and tried to look shy, and meanwhile the jackal ate up the other half of the hare.

"Here—here's this—where's my party?" exclaimed the buzzard, as she got to see what had happened.

"Oh, we took the meat and you have the taffy," replied the jackal as he licked his chops and walked off.

Moral.—When craft will not avail and argument goes for naught, satiety will always win.

Filed It on the Princess.
In China it is etiquette to regard one as older than he or she really is. When the Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia visited Shanghai, they met a notable mandarin, one of whose first questions to the prince—this being an invariable matter of Chinese politeness—was:

"How old are you?"
"A little more than 30," answered the prince, smiling.

"Indeed," said the mandarin. "Your highness appears 50."

The mandarin then turned to the Interpreter—Herr Vogt, a German, and inquired the princess' age. She answered, "Thirty-two." The interpreter interpreted, and the mandarin was greatly pleased, and it was deemed to be complimentary. The interpreter blushed uneasily and hesitated to translate the remark. The prince saw the difficulty and laughingly commanded:

"Put with it, Vogt!"
He says, "The interpreter then translated to the princess, "that your highness looks like 60!"

He had meant it well, and of course the princess had sense enough not to take it ill.

Should Women Smoke?
I have no earthly objection to women smoking; only, if they do smoke, they should smoke seriously. Most of them smoke a little with a cigarette. Now, that scarcely amounts to smoking at all. If they really want to, let them take to cigarette pipes.

Someone dignified old lady, a Polish countess—what is her name? Countess? Countess?—oh, well, Thingamajiggy—ends in "sky" anyhow—and I respect that woman. She genuinely smokes, and no mistake about it. There is no playing there. She looks on it as a sacred duty. She has a long pipe with a wooden stem and the bark on, and a fine big bowl—a regular man's pipe.

When she was visiting me she just loaded up and smoked, and loaded up and smoked, and loaded up and smoked again. She meant business. I know another lady who has a long Turkish pipe, and she, too, means business. If women are ever to be genuine smokers, that is the way they must go to work.—Mark Twain.

THE SOYING.
One went that his harvest was small,
With little of fruit or of grain.
With his neighbor, he was a swineherd's
Son, and his wife a full freighted wain.
"How much did they now?" I said. "Friend,
A handful of wheat, less or more,
To the sickle from such scanty store?
Who sparingly soweth must look
For a bountiful harvest to reap.
"Tis only the bountiful sower can reap
A bountiful harvest again.
A handful of wheat, less or more,
For harvest time will be here;
With bountiful hands let them weep at the last.
When the Lord of the harvest draws near." —Watch Tower.

When the Heart Is Young

How an Organist Sought Love
Through a Medium and Found It Through Accident.

D-O-D-D-S

We Are His Flock.

A local clergyman is telling a joke on himself. He went to Chicago on business and was asked by a family in his church to call on a married daughter there. The pastor called and received a hospitable welcome. They used him to come to dinner, but he had no engagements. Then they remarked, "Well, will you not eat a little luncheon?" The hostess pointed as she spoke to a small table on which were a small dish of salad, some bread and fruit. "Well, I don't care if I do," replied the caller, who drew up a chair and began an onslaught on the provisions. He fancied they had been arranged expressly for him, and it was only after he had got through that he noticed the blank looks of the family. In fact, he had devoured the entire luncheon which all had expected to eat.

"Madam, what must you think of me?" he exclaimed to the hostess. "But let me beg of you not to judge all Kentuckians by me. I am the sole stipend in our state."

He was equal to the lady whose hostess showed her a dish of water cress at a side table just before dinner was served. Thinking it had just been prepared, she struck a match in the dish and took a handful of it only to find it dressed with French salad dressing and prepared to accompany the birds at the meat.

He Noticed the Likeness.

A Parisian swain recently had a crayon picture of himself made, which he afterward pretended to find fault with.

"It does not bear the slightest resemblance to me," said he, "and I will not take it."

The artist protested, but all to no avail.

After the dandy had left the painter added to the portrait a magnificent pair of ass' ears and exhibited it in the window, thus altered, to the gaze of the curvaceous public.

It hadn't been long exposed when the dandy entered the artist's studio in a towering rage, and, finding that threats among other things, he had considerably advance upon the original picture.

"It wasn't strange you didn't recognize your resemblance to the picture at first," said the painter, "but I knew you'd notice the likeness as soon as I added those ears." —Spare Moments.

Marriage by Halters.

Among ignorant people of English birth it is fully believed that a wife bought with money or goods is legally married if the purchaser leads her all the way home by a halter.

Mr. Baring Gould, the English antiquarian, tells of a village post known to him who bought a wife for a half crown and led her 12 miles to his cottage.

The squire and the rector protested to the village post that he was not legally wedded.

"I'll take my Bible oath I never did take the halter off till she'd crossed the door and the door was shut," said he.

The latest instances of such wife sales occurred in 1858 and 1859, when women were sold in Little Horton and in Dindley. In these cases a blue ribbon took the place of the straw halter.

But, gentle ladies, the symbolic idea was the same.

MAXIM HELMAYER.

"Well, monsieur, and have you found a suitable lady among those you have met?"

Monsieur looked at the minister's wife with a terrified look at its mention.

"Good madame, are there all ladies
but me selected for me?" he stammered.

"Why, you've seen seven. That is a great many to select from, is it not?"

"Zey are all old ladies, I say it not?"

"Zey are not foolish, zan call it—not full
of feeling."

"Man alive!" cried Mrs. Dahl, for getting her politeness in her vexation.

"Did you expect to meet young girls—to marry as if you were young and fresh yourself? Why, man, look at yourself!"

"You are past middle age. You are not young, you are old."

"Zey are not foolish, zan call it—not full
of feeling."

She pushed him in front of the long mirror. The poor little organism looked long and hung his head. Then he said for the first time, "I am the son of a poor man."

"Madame, un huf been kind, verr kind. Zu speak truly. I am nicht young. Zu work zo steady, zo poverty may be imagined when the excited Asiatin, in a compound of bad English, German and French, poured forth his heart's desire, his desire for his hopes, and brought his assistance in finding him a proper life companion.

The hopelessness of the task struck her at once, but the earnestness of the organist gained her sympathies. She questioned, she deliberated, hesitated and was lost. Ere an hour had passed she had promised him her assistance.

"I will introduce you to such ladies
as would be suitable, you understand,"
she said; "you must do your own court-
ing, etc."

"Oh, zay, suitable," he nodded smilingly. "Zet is suit you an suit me, as
'ts great affaire for me, you understand."

Mrs. Dahl watched him away in the direction of the park with misgivings.

She would be, but she could not fathom the feeling of this poor alien,

who felt that now at a late day he might find a husband and find a heart to mate.

Mrs. Dahl was a sympathetic woman.

She entered the interview in her diary and memorandum book. On Monday she discussed the matter for a half hour with her husband, then prepared to go to the church and to the organist.

"I will introduce you to such ladies
as would be suitable, you understand,"
she said; "you must do your own court-
ing, etc."

"Oh, zay, suitable," he nodded smil-
ingly. "Zet is suit you an suit me, as
'ts great affaire for me, you understand."

Her husband did not reply.

In the dusk of the evening M. Anguste leaned from the attic window.

The magnificence of sunset was in his face, the silvery moon rode high in the east. His eyes showed that he had wept.

Now a calmness was in them, the calmness of a resurgent hope. A pile of music lay on a chair near him. He would soon go down to the church and by the single gas jet lighted in the vast room give his whole soul up to his goddess, music.

She would be richer by the death of a husband, the rude dominion of a foolish
but benevolent dream.

The organist was still knock at the door.

When he opened it, there stood a tall, slight girl. She was very young and very timid. On her arm hung a basket from which she took a bunch for him.

"Zanks to zu, Mila. Marguerite.
Condo not zo small brozzer come wiz ze article? Nicht zu?"

The girl colored and tears came into her eyes.

"He is sick. There was no one else.

Mother hopes the mending will suit

you and that you will have more."

"Yab, oni, I mean yes," said M. Anguste gravely. "I will come to see small brozzer tomorrow. It will be great pizzlar to me. I tell him. I will go down zo stirs wiz zu, mademoiselle.
Zu are one brave girl—one goat girl."

They proceeded down three flights to the street door. In the light the organist saw the traces of tears on the girl's cheeks. His heart melted. Another wept in sorrow, one so young and who would, were it not for grinding poverty, be fair, be happy. His voice was very gentle.

"Go home, my child," he said. "You must all suffer much. I will not forget to see zo small brozzer tomorrow. If he is in great danger, come to see church for me zis evening. I play zo organ to ease my son. Good night, mademoiselle.
I will, not forget to pray for ze happiness of one so young, so sorrowful."

He turned up the street, but as she hurried away the girl smiled at him through a very rainbow of tears. That same went with him, and after he lighted the gas jet in the church gallery
he turned to the organ and once more played out an ecstatic, improvised chant to love, to home, to peace, to him, his young heart's best wishes —Chicago Herald.

her in the future.

She chose the next fine day for her

the sensitive organist the last of her seven

AID OF FOREIGNERS.

Maitre Labori Makes an Appeal to Foreign Governments.

SCHWARTZKOPPEN--PANIZZARDI

These Two May Yet Testify Before the Dreyfus Court-Martial at Rennes--A Momentous Move by the Defence

Testimony of Reporters Shows

That Estherazy Confesses to Writing the Dreyfus.

Rennes, Sept. 8.—M. Cornuchy, the political refugee and reputed son of Serbian royalty, who appeared on Monday before the Dreyfus court-martial as a witness for the prosecution, was examined by the court during the time it sat behind closed doors yesterday. Examination of the secret espionage dossier mentioned by Captain Cuignet during Monday's sitting occupied the greater portion of yesterday's secret session of the court. M. Cornuchy, who had been court-martial begun. M. Labori presented a formal application to the court for an order upon Major Carreras, the Government commissioner, to request that interested foreign governments, through diplomatic channels, communicate to the court various documents relating to the borders.

M. Labori explained the purpose of the application by citing the fact that the court was now in an extremely delicate situation, as it had been compelled to call in Major Carriere Colon, Schwartzkoppen and Signor Panizzardi as witnesses he deemed necessary to summon. M. Labori said he thought this step would worry nobody and that it was in conformity with precedents.

Major Carreras replied that he did not think the Government would ask another government for the restoration of documents. He suggested that the defence should obtain and submit the papers semi-officially to the court. He saw no objection to hearing Colonel Schwartzkoppen and Signor Panizzardi for the defense.

Colonel Journaud said the court would decide the matter later, and meanwhile proceeded with the taking of evidence.

Estherazy's Confession.

The first witness called to the bar yesterday was the reporter, Bassett, whom Colonel Journaud sent to London to interview Major Courts Ferdinand Walstein Estherazy. The witness deposed that Estherazy confessed to him that he wrote the bordereau under orders from Colonel Sandher. Who was then chief of the Secret Intelligence Service. The order, Estherazy said, was to catch the traitor at the headquarters of the general staff, whom Estherazy afterwards said was Captain Dreyfus. Major Carreras here burst out with an extraordinary protest against Major Estherazy's insinuations against Colonel Sandher. "I protest," he said, "in the name and memory of Colonel Sandher against the insinuations introduced against him."

A Ridiculous Protest.

M. Labori, however, ignored this protest, which he styled "a ridiculous protest." M. Labori then called upon General Roget, who, after reading letters he had received from Major Estherazy since the opening of the trial, said that Roget yesterday looked the ghost of his former active self. His face was careworn and showed little of that fighting spirit which first characterized his appearance upon the stand. He replied that he only opened one letter from Major Estherazy, which had been forwarded to Colonel Journaud. General Roget added that he declined to receive other letters.

The Letters Were Read.

M. Labori then asked Colonel Journaud to have the letters read.

Colonel Journaud at first declined, but M. Labori insisted so firmly that Colonel Journaud, after wrangling awhile, gave way and consented that the letters should be read. Colonel Journaud explained that he opposed reading the letters because they only contained attacks upon various parties and would only lead to a prolongation of the trial.

General Roget then read the one Estherazy letter which he admitted having opened. In this letter Major Estherazy said he could not prove the existence of the alleged syndicate organized in the interest of Dreyfus, and complained that the general staff had refused to give him a copy of the letter.

M. Labori then put a series of questions intended to bring out the fact that the general staff had made use of Major Estherazy, even after he was known to be unreliable. General Roget said he had not consulted Major Estherazy's avowals to any value.

Labori and Journaud.

M. Labori sought to question the General more closely on his statement that none of the generals of the general staff had been familiar with Major Estherazy, but Colonel Journaud declined to allow further discussion.

This led to another scene between the presidents of the court-martial and counsel for the defence. M. Labori, delating that General Roget, who was serving as a public prosecutor, that as he wished, refused to reply to probing questions.

A little later M. Labori pushed the question on General Billot, on what is known as the liberating document.

Zouave.

Colonel Journaud then came upon the platform, dressed in the uniform of his rank, and with his incomparable eyeglass. He spoke a few words respecting the general staff's belief in Major Estherazy.

At Cornuchy asked General Roget his opinion of Major Estherazy.

"I have an absolute conviction," replied General Roget, amid cries of "Oh! Oh! Oh!" from the court.

"I have an absolute conviction," said Major Estherazy to General Roget.

General Roget then delivered a short discourse in reply to the statement of M. Des Fonds Lamotte on Saturday that the phrase in the bordereau, "I am going to the United States," refers to those Dreyfus and not to the author of the bordereau.

General Roget maintained that M. Lamotte was wrong.

Dreyfus Inested.

Captain Dreyfus rose, and in a clear voice, and said that the date of the trial of May 17, 1894, at which time the probabilities would not go to the manoeuvres, was written in the clearest language, which the court would see if it were read. He reiterated that he had never asked to go to the manoeuvres, for that reason, and that that was the reason he would not be granted.

M. Deffes, a reporter for The Temps, testified that he saw Major Estherazy in London, and that the latter confessed that he was the author of the bordereau. The witness added that he related the question of the letters of Madame Bonhag, and brought away the impression that Estherazy wrote the "Urbain" letter.

In Favor of Dreyfus.

M. Trarieux, former Minister of Justice, was the next witness called. He made a statement to the court, and then reviewed the history of the case and his own part in connection therewith.

M. Trarieux is an excellent speaker, with a good presence. He has grey hair and mustache, and a clear, resonant voice. He is a good orator, and often in the court room. M. Trarieux's deposition was made public session. He made a very telling speech, describing how his original belief in the guilt of Dreyfus was first shaken, and then completely changed to conviction of innocence, by subsequent investigation.

M. Schreuer-Kosack, formerly vice-president of the Senate. The letters exchanged between General Gouraud and Lieut.-Col. Pleiquart also strengthened his conviction.

M. Trarieux spoke of the machinations against Pleiquart, and said he accused himself of being a secret agent, and chief witness deposed. M. Trarieux recounted a conversation with a foreign ambassador, who declared, in a tone of great sincerity, that Dreyfus had never had relations with him or with any officer of his country, while the ambassador added that he had no documents proving the guilt of Major Estherazy.

An Impressive Day.

M. Trarieux delivered a very impressive passage, recalling the execution on the charge of treason of the English admiral, Byng, who was afterwards found to have been unjustly condemned. M. Trarieux said that Frenchmen might well dread the hand of a physician upon their history, as the execution of Admiral Byng mars the history of England. M. Trarieux said that General Roget and Captain Cuignet were wrong in the conclusion that they had drawn from the correspondence of agents "A" and "B" that Dreyfus was guilty. He reiterated that the ambassador to whom he had referred had claimed that Major Estherazy was the traitor. He said that the ambassador to whom he had referred had claimed that he had not only opened one letter, but had read all the letters, and that he had a right to do so, as he was the only one entitled to do so.

Carriere Interrupted.

M. Trarieux, on alluding to the border, was interrupted by Major Carreras, who said he had an official application to file for a general adjournment, yet, if by a side wind the documents mentioned in the bordereau could be procured, he certainly would be personally much pleased.

This was practically an invitation to the court to volunteer to communicate the documents in question.

At the conclusion of M. Trarieux's testimony, which was a veritable speech for the defence, and which, apparently, made an impression upon the judges, the court adjourned behind closed doors and examined the secret espionage dossier.

The Letters Were Read.

The court also deliberated upon M. Labori's request that application be made to the court for the documents described in the bordereau. The decision was unanimously reached to reject the application, on the ground that the court was incompetent to invite the Government to take diplomatic steps to obtain the documents in question. It was also decided to hear M. Cornuchy behind closed doors to-day.

TEMPORARY LINE AGREED ON.

▲ Modus Vivendi in the Matter of the Canada Alaska Boundary.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Great Britain and the United States have practically agreed upon a temporary line defining the boundary between Alaska and Canada. Negotiations now in progress relate only to minor questions growing out of the original question as to the status of minor islands off America, which may lap over into territory which has been under the control of Canada. The prospective settlement of the boundary question is due to concessions made not only by Great Britain, but by this Government also.

Secretary Hay has won in the matter of excluding Canada from the Lynn Canal, but a portion of the canal which is given should be given to Canada to give it a permanent harbor.

The Secretary has also been successful in negotiating the British to the north of the village of Ketchikan, though it is said he has not given up the idea of getting the first beyond the village instead of four miles beyond, as originally demanded.

Secretary Hay laid down the correspondence to the Cabinet at its meeting yesterday.

It was expected that the modus vivendi will be signed within a few days, unless Canada should assume an unfavorable attitude in the matter.

▲ Liberia and Japan.

M. Labori sought to question the General more closely on his statement that none of the generals of the general staff had been familiar with Major Estherazy, but Colonel Journaud declined to allow further discussion.

This led to another scene between the presidents of the court-martial and counsel for the defence. M. Labori, delating that General Roget, who was serving as a public prosecutor, that as he wished, refused to reply to probing questions.

A little later M. Labori pushed the question on General Billot, on what is known as the liberating document.

Zouave.

Colonel Journaud then came upon the platform, dressed in the uniform of his rank, and with his incomparable eyeglass. He spoke a few words respecting the general staff's belief in Major Estherazy.

Harry Clark Drowned.

Frankford, Ont., Sept. 6.—Yesterday about 5.30 a.m., Harry Clark, aged 21, of George Clark's, proprietor of the Clark House, Frankford, went out on the Trent River in a canoe. In about half an hour his canoe was seen against the rocks below the fort bridge, half full of water. His body was soon ashore. Friends, noticing his dog running up and down the river, thought he had gone to search down the river below Frankford, and his body was found about two miles down the rapids at 11.20 o'clock.

Dreyfus Inested.

Captain Dreyfus rose, and in a clear voice, and said that the date of the trial of May 17, 1894, at which time the probabilities would not go to the manoeuvres, was written in the clearest language, which the court would see if it were read. He reiterated that he had never asked to go to the manoeuvres, for that reason, and that that was the reason he would not be granted.

Central Prison Statistics.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—During the month of August there were discharged from the Central Prison 60 prisoners; first convictions 83, second or more than two convictions 32. There were 43 Canadians, 3 English, 7 Americans, 2 Irish, 3 Scotch; others 3.

THE SEAMEN'S STRIKE IS ON.

No Serious Effect Is Visible to the Naked Eye So Far.

London, Sept. 6.—The strike of seamen continues without interest and apparently without serious effect on the shipping industry. Masters and men both admit several days must elapse before matters can come to a head.

Mr. Joseph Hawley-Wilson, member of Parliament for Paddington, said that Radio, but who was selected more as a labor representative, and who is taking a prominent part in the movement, says that the miller men at South Shields have notified their employers that they will strike upon the receipt of a telegram from the Glasgow men that the Glasgow men are leaving their vessels. He added that two vessels were blocked on the Tyne, and that the strike reported from Liverpool were encouraging.

The secretary of the union at Liverpool reports: "Eleven large steamers are blocked on the Tyne, including the Oceanic and the Lusitania."

This assertion, however, is contrary to the statement issued by the ship owners.

Loubet Summons the Senate.

Paris, Sept. 6.—President Loubet has issued a decree assembling the Senate on Sept. 18 at a High Court.

It is understood that the call will include charges both of conspiracy and attempts against the internal safety of the state.

A Mad Monarch's Freak.

"At the time the malady of Ludwig II, the mad king of Bavaria, was at its worst he gave orders that 30 of his finest horses should be put in the best condition possible for a race," writes Professor J. H. Gore in The Ladies' Home Journal. "When the report came that no further improvement could be made, he had them brought into an open field where every conceivable form of noise making device had been stationed.

"The horses were tied to posts, and the king from an elevated stand gave the signal that started the flare of trumpets, the booming of cannon, the firing of bombs and other outlandish noises. The horses reared, plunged, struggled to get free, and finally breaking loose started in the widest of gallops from the building. But toward whatever corner of the field they fled they were stopped by noises just as terrifying and sent to another quarter to be frightened again and again.

"When the horses became too tired to run well, the king found the spectacle uninteresting and ordered the orgy to cease. By this cruel freak the royal steeds lost a number of their most valuable animals."

Shocked the Chief Justice.

Lord Russell of Killowen, the chief justice of England, was in London for a few days last long vacation, and having nothing to do after the morning accepted a friend's invitation to luncheon at his club. After luncheon a scrubber was with difficulty got together, very few members being in the room. The fourth man, a young subaltern in the guards, only joined after mentioning that he played a very poor rubber. Unfortunately the chief cut him as partner, several times in succession. At first he only fidgeted a little and made one or two mild inquiries. But after something diabolical his lordship broke out with, "I really think, sir, you are playing badly on purpose to annoy me."

"Oh, shut up!" said the soldier. "How can any fellow play when you keep jawing at him?" Lord Russell, with quiet dignity, observed, "I don't think you know to whom you are speaking, sir."

"Oh, yes, I do," said the warrior. "You are the lord chief justice, but you're not in your blooming police court now."

Tableau.

A Startling Answer.

A Latin professor was explaining the derivation of our word "ostroscopic" to his class in a local academy. He told the story of the early Roman republics and the scheming of the politicians of those days.

He related how, when any man in the public service obtained to his neighbors, they used to write his name on an oyster shell (Latin—ostro-um shell), and on the receipt of a specified sum paid by the consuls that man would be killed, killed or otherwise removed in some of the most unusual ways the old Romans had. When he had finished his explanation, he said:

"Now, the boy here in the front seat, what did we derive from the old Latin use of the shell, which was called osseum?"

The answer he expected was far from what he got, for the little student with spectacles in the front seat uttered a long and involved answer.

"From the common habit of using shells to get the best of people, we derive the present Coney Island game, which is a fascinating and costly sport."

Her Unfair Test.

She—which would you rather be, a little toad in a big puddle or a big toad in a little puddle?

He (after long and serious thought)—Well, all things considered, I'd prefer to be a big toad in a little puddle.

She—There! I have always thought that you had no real ambition to make a man of yourself.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Influence of the Flat.

The flat has made its mark on the conditions of modern life. A good illustration of this fact is the following story of a bright Kenwood youngster "going on 6." The boy heard a visitor say to his grandmother, "Well, I suppose you feel very proud these days, with three of your sons married and settled?"

"Only two," corrected the boy, who was not supposed to understand anything at all about the subject. Just to see what his idea was his grandmother and her visitor cross examined him. The conversation ran like this:

"Why do you think only two are married? John? There's your Uncle Jim—one's his one."

"Yes, ma'am. And he lives in a flat."

"What's that to do with it? And there's your Uncle Fred—he's two."

"Yes, ma'am. And he lives in a flat too."

"Why, yes; certainly. And there's your own father—he's three."

"No, ma'am," cried the youngster triumphantly. "My papa isn't married. I know he isn't 'cause he lives in a house."

An astonishing report is going the rounds about the new gun made at Woolwich, which is said to be so powerful that no range is long enough to withstand its force. It is reported that it was impossible to get the exact range. But, the range was conservatively estimated at fifteen miles. As the extreme testing grounds will not be ready for some time, it is said that the gun is being shortened so that it can be tested.

An Early Story of Crayon.

Here is one of Robert Crawford's stories about Uruguay: "Two men surrounded a farmer and his wife in their little hut while it was broad daylight. The man was seized and bound, and the two villains proceeded to torture him to make him disclose the hiding place of his board. The wife begged and pleaded as the horrors increased, the man proving obstinate.

"Finally she said she would tell them where the treasures were if they would let her go. One of the robbers reluctantly went over to the spot in the corner with her. She crept up, fumbling about inside of it for a moment until she found what she was looking for. In another moment the thief at her side was dead and his fellow covered by a large revolver in the hands of a small but eager woman of the people. He got away before she could quite make up her mind to shoot him too."

"Then the husband was released and the neighbors, some miles away, called in. Word was finally taken to the central police authority of the state; the officers came, viewed the dead thief, and identified him as their attorney general. It is not unlikely," Mr. Crawford adds, "that his accomplice was the judge of the criminal court."

A Miraculous Escapade.

It happened that in the last month of the reign of Charles I a certain ship chandler of London was foolish enough to buy himself over a barrel of gunpowder with a lighted candle in his hand. He paid the price of his folly. A spark fell into the gunpowder and the place was blown up.

The trouble was that the man who did the mischief was not the only one to perish. Fifty houses were wrecked, and the number of people who were killed was not known.

In one house among the 50 a mother had put her baby into its cradle to sleep before the explosion occurred. What became of the mother no one ever knew, but what became of the baby was very widely known.

The next morning there was found lying on the floor of the Church of All Hallows a young child in a cradle, baby and cradle being entirely uninjured by the explosion that had lifted both to such a giddy height.

It was never learned who the child was, but she was adopted by a gentleman of the parish and grew to womanhood. She must surely all her life have had a peculiar interest in that church.—Sir Walter Besant's "London."

Ice Explosions in Siberia.

A recent Siberian traveler relates "At Sadsol in the intensely cold silence the snow sometimes broken by a loud report as of a cannon. This was the bursting of one of the ice bubbles in the river, a phenomenon I had neither heard nor read of before. The streams were frozen down from the hills were frozen on the surface some six to nine inches thick. The water then flowed faster than it could escape, and the pressure, on the principle of a hydraulic press, became irresistible. First, the elasticity of the ice was seen by the rising of circular mounds from six to eight feet in diameter and from four to five feet high. The bursting point came at last with a report like an explosion. The water escaped, but soon froze again. I have seen scores of these ice blocks in a few verats of the river.

A Bridge of Canes.

When the British forces were marching to Peking in 1860, after the capture of the Taku fort, one of the rivers became so swollen with the heavy rains that it was rendered almost impassable. While in this quandary a bright idea suddenly struck one of our officers. He said: "Let us make the Chinese general believe that we are in advance and keep them on the press so as also that they are perfectly airtight, he then emitted with his brother officers with the result that orders were given to search all the houses of the village and collect every coffin. With the aid of a few empty caskets the soldiers constructed a pontoon bridge of coffins sufficiently strong to bear the artillery, and the river was thus passed in safety.

Where the Tail Went.

Do you remember the story of Harry's and George's rabbit—how Harry's rabbit got out of its hutch and disappeared for a week and at last crept home without its tail to die and how, when Harry cried bitterly over his dead tailless rabbit, George tried to comfort him?

"Don't cry, Harry, dear; don't cry it's only the body you see! The tail has gone, heaven—'Memories and Fancies,'" by Lady Gordon.

Renowned for its destination

The humbugs who flung overboard a bottle containing the following lines of poetry never posed a more serious destination.

On board SS. Tanganica, Beaver Line, bound for Montreal, Canada. Just drunk the last drop of whisky when I heard a noise, and then turned to see it the first pub on the right, off the Prince's Landing Stage, under the arch, close to the electric railway station, round the corner, Liverpool.

But they were seeking without success. No Newfoundland port had been visited.

Then I got up by main sailing boat on the west coast of the island two months later, it was delivered to the post office people and duly delivered at Liverpool on 26th of July.

The post office said: "The postmaster, first public house to the right of Prince's landing stage, under railway arch, close to the electric railway station, Liverpool, England."

EASE AND DISEASE

A Short Lesson on the Meaning of a Familiar Word.

Disease is the opposite of ease. Webster defines disease as "lack of ease, uneasiness, trouble, vexation, some disorder, etc." It is a state of some derangement of the physical organism. A vast majority of the "disease" from which people suffer is due to impure blood. Disease of this kind is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is a tonic, restorative, vivifying, and strengthening. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, pinacles, and all eruptions. It tones the stomach and creates a good appetite, and it gives vigor and vitality to the whole body. It reverses the condition of things, giving health, comfort and "ease" in place of "disease."

The Venezuela Commission.

Paris, September 2.—Sir Robert Threlkeld Reid, Q.C., former Attorney-General of Great Britain, at Friday's session of the Anglo-Venezuelan Boundary Arbitration Commission, produced evidence in behalf of the circumstantial contention to show how thoroughly the British commissioners had also testified to the correctness of the claim of Venezuela, giving the names of persons who had been present at the trials of the two sides.

Grant stepped forward, and, after a round of cheers, the people were as quiet as a church in prayer time. Waiting an instant, Grant raised his hand, made a gesture toward Johnson and said clearly, "The president of the United States."

The incident was a simple one, but it spoke volumes. Grant's face was full of indignation and reproach, and the crowd, accepting his rebuke, listened to the president for an hour. And the president did not spare the people. He scolded them to his heart's content, replied to all their taunts, talked back to every man that opened his mouth and seemed to enjoy the performance as a war horse would a battle. The people took the scolding in good part and realized that this land was in command of a man of great ability.

Milley's Grip Powders Cure.

Many stories are current about the Prince of Wales' recent visit to Montebello, where he was most democratic. It is said that a Polish Jew, sitting on a park bench next to the Prince, was keeping his identity, but also to the Prince, his name and what he did for his income. The Prince, however, was digging with his Royal Highness in the ribs, and telling him he looked too healthy to need the water cure.

GRANT CALMED THEM

AN INCIDENT OF JOHNSON'S FAMOUS SWING AROUND THE CIRCLE.

A Painful Spectacle Which the General Brought to a Close by Forcing the Tumultuous Crowd to Listen to the President.

There is nothing in history that corresponds to that wonderful swing of President Johnson from Washington to Chicago by way of Robert Hood's road.

Mr. Johnson planned the trip with infinite cunning. He prided himself on how well he understood the people, and that he could meet them face to face he could convince them that the president was right and congress wrong. To get the love of the people he carried with him General Grant, Admiral Farragut, Secretaries Seward, Welles and Randall, General Custer and other men well known to the people. He reasoned that accompanied by the popular idols of the day, he would be sure of success, and that he could swing anywhere. That was all that he asked. Give him a big crowd, and he was confident that he could win them over.

The president started from Washington with a clip on his shoulder. The very first crowd he met knocked it off without ceremony. It soon became clear the people were in a resentful mood, and after two or three clashes some derangement of the physical organism. A vast majority of the "disease" from which people suffer is due to impure blood. Disease of this kind is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The work of repairing the piers and dredging the channel at Rondeau Harbour, Ont., will be proceeded with immediately. Parliament voted $10,500 last session for the work.

The schooner Ligon, of Toronto, sank in Lake Huron last Sunday and has been reported lost. The steamer of the steamer Clinton, and being struck by a sudden squall, she sank so rapidly it was with difficulty the crews of the other boats cut loose from her. She was loaded with coal from Buffalo for Depot Harbor.

Lack of tonnage has increased freight rates on the great lakes. Large ships are now laying up, and the advisability of suspending steamer plates for new vessels contemplated, on account of the scarcity of material on this side of the ocean. Men interested in the lake traffic are anxious that more vessels be built and that quickly. Fabulous figures have been refused for charters and vessels for the rest of the season, but with no takers.

It Helps the Crakers.
Odd bits of change thoughtlessly left by customers form no inconsiderable part of the income of cashiers in restaurants, saloons, cigar stores and similar places where, during many hours of each day, there is a steady rush of patrons.

"I get $15 a week salary," said a cashier, "and I always count on an additional $3, or 50 cents per day, through forgotten change. I do not consider that I am doing anything dishonest, either because I always make an effort to attract the customer's attention to the fact that he is leaving his change behind. Nine cases out of ten I succeed, even if I have to send a waiter to follow the man clear out into the street. But there are enough of the tenth cases to make my receipts foot up all of the sum weekly I have named. The majority of them are people who come to catch a train, and I have to keep an appointment, and they haven't the time to return, even if they did discover their loss a square or so away. The next day they don't care, or at least the majority of them do not, to speak about such a small matter, the overlooked change seldom being more than 5 or 10 cents, and I am just so much ahead. The proprietor gets it! Certainly not. It doesn't belong to him, and just so the money in the cash drawer balances with the register he is satisfied."

The Conspiracy Failed.

Once upon a time there lived in Leavenworth the late Len T. Smith, whom all old timers remember, and General Powell Clayton. Smith was in New York one day when he was approached by a chap who said he had on the string a rich friend from Cuba, who was anxious to start a big faro game and wanted him to deal for him. He proposed a sum that he would take up the offer—Smith should receive 10 per cent, and he would co-operate with Smith, so that together they could rob the Cuban of $50,000.

Smith sent up letters for Clayton and told him what the gambler had proposed. All three started out to see the Cuban, and they found him surrounded by everything refreshing that money could buy. Smith and Clayton ate and drank and drove and went to the theater and had all sorts of fun at the Cuban's expense for three or four days, all the time having under consideration the proposed conspiracy.

Finally, when they were through with their business in New York, they thanked the gamblers for their hospitality and suggested that they look for suckers elsewhere than from among frontiersmen from Kansas. It was estimated that the gamblers spent at least $1,000 entertaining their intended victims—Kansas City Journal.

A LOVER'S FAREWELL.

Good-bye, my darling,
Dear to me even now,
Though I give you back your promise
And release you from your vow,
I have given you my heart, and all I sought for
Has given away before.

And I know that love in my nature
Is words so tender and fair,
For I did have it better.

Then I did have it to bear,
If you had but told me truly
That your heart was given for aye,
I would have given mine to you.
That crushes my heart today.

Yet, who should I weekly blame you
For the thoughts in my bosom bid me,
Was my own fond heart that led me
To love you as I do now.

And I did have you now, sorrow,
And put it away in silence,
To make me more content.
For since I know I possess not

The love that had been as a prize,
Should I then have my pride crushed
To ashes before you now?

No! Rather farewell forever,

And long may the bright skies
Be over me, and may I have chosen
It will bring me no more sorrow.

Better it death had ended me.

For then I could have said to me,
Your memory would have perished
To work with a stronger will
And to forget the love I had.

And to forget the love I had,
And to forget the love I had.

It is the love of a lover of you.

That brought a fruition of pain,

And the love that I held for an hour

I parted with my last treasure

To drift on a boundless sea;

I have gathered life's fairest blossom—

There will come no fruit to me.

A SOLEMN OCCASION.

The Only Interview Buchanan Had With His Vice President.

Vice President Stevenson used to tell a story of his interview with President Breckinridge and him to illustrate the traditional relations between the president and the man whose principle business it is to wait for the possible death of the president, in order that he may take the president's chair.

Breckinridge said that Buchanan never consulted him about any important matter, although as a Kentuckian, he had the confidence of most of the southern leaders, he felt that his advice might at times have been valuable to the president. In the early fall of 1860, when Buchanan's term was nearing an end, amid the gathering clouds of war, Vice President Breckinridge received an urgent summons to the White House. He responded at once, thinking that at last the president would be interested in the momentous questions then pending. When he arrived he was shown into the president's room, and Mr. Buchanan, who was alone, called his private secretary and instructed him to see that they were not disturbed by anybody during the important conference which was to follow.

When the private secretary had withdrawn, the president unlocked the private drawer in his desk, took out a manuscript, sat down with great solemnity, and said to Vice President Breckinridge, in his most impressive manner, "I want to read you the draft of my Thanksgiving day proclamation and to get your opinion of it."

The vice president controlled his facial muscles, listened respectfully and seriously made some complimentary remarks about the important document, bowed and smiled his way out from the only interview to which he was ever invited by President Buchanan.—Boston Herald.

He Worked the Grocer.

A true story of a dog found guilty of obtaining goods under false pretenses has been recently told. The animal is very fond of crackers, and has been taught by his owner to go after them himself, carrying a written order in his mouth. Day after day he appeared at the grocer's, bringing his master's orders for crackers until the clerks became careless about reading the document. One day the man came in and complained that he had been charged for much more crackers than he had ordered. There was quite a dispute over it, and the next time the dog came in the grocer took the trouble to look at the paper. It was blank; and further investigation showed that whenever the dog felt a craving for crackers he hopped up a piece of paper and trotted off to the grocery store.—Atlanta Constitution.

Begging Letters for the Rich.

A lady living less than a day's journey from New York had the curiosity the other day to make certain calculations in order to see how large a part of her property she would have had to sacrifice had she granted all the requests made for money within a period of 42 days. She kept all the begging letters, and, after a careful count, added together the amounts they asked for and then discovered that had she granted each individual request for money she would have disbursed $1,600,000. And this, be it remembered, in a short period of six weeks.—Harrer's Bazaar.

Mr. J. BUCHANAN,

THE CORNER STORE,

St. George Street.

An interesting Experiment.

That the earth revolves on its axis can be proved by a simple experiment. Fill a medium sized bowl nearly full of water and place it upon the floor of a room that is not exposed to jar it from the street. Upon the surface of the water sprinkle a coating of lycopodium powder. Then take powdered charcoal and draw a straight black line two inches long upon the coating—the line should be north and south.

After this is done lay upon the floor a stick so that it will be exactly parallel to the straight line. Any stationary object in the room will answer as well, provided it is placed with the line. If the bowl is left undisturbed for several hours, it will be seen that the black mark has turned toward the parallel object and has moved from east to west, in a direction opposite to the movement of the earth on its axis. This proves that the earth in revolving has carried the water with it, but the powder on the surface has been left a little behind.

To Extract a Splinter.

The easiest way to extract a splinter deep in the flesh of the hand or foot is by means of steam. A rather wide mouthed bottle is filled two-thirds full of boiling water, and the injured spot is held close over the opening. The suction draws the flesh down, and a little additional pressure is used to assist the exit of the intruder. In a few moments the steam extracts the splinter, and the inflammation rapidly subsides.

The Old Man's Retort.
"You don't have any ruins in this blasted country," said the British scion to his future father-in-law.

"No," said the old man, "we don't."

And you won't have any left in England if your noble army of titled puppers can carry enough rich Yankees girls to put new roofs on your old castles."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Needed a Shave.

He had been out so late the night before that he did not know at what hour he had come home. When he awoke, he was curious to learn just how "rocky" he looked. He accordingly reached out for the silver backed hand mirror that lay on the table beside his bed.

Instead of the mirror he got hold of the silver backed hairbrush. Not recognizing his mistake, he took the brush up and gazed at the bristles for a moment. Then he felt of the silver back and then stared back at the brush.

"Good heavens," he murmured at last, "but I need a shave!" San Francisco Argonaut.

"Stupid and dull!" He echoed the words involuntarily, while he was thinking what a dainty outline the contour of her cheek must make—like a pink rosebud, and with a singularly sweet intonation she had.

"You agree that we are so," she said after an instant's offended silence.

"Will you walk the old road, weeping, when I have come?"

"Will you be in a hovel—go a beggar to the grave?"

Out upon the poor man's woe! Who would be the poor man's slave?

"Heed you, how the words of wisdom: Let but poverty appear.

In the door and love, affrighted, flit out the window, dear!"

Would you welcome thorns for roses, so to cry over the gold you can save?

Bitter bread the poor man brings you. Out upon the poor man's slave!"

Does she listen? Tear drops glisten, but she heeds no golden gleam,

In the open heart of the meadows width her trimmings all their gold and jewels, all that valuer women crave—

Arms around the weeping mother—"Let me be the poor man's slave!"

THE PROFESSOR

A Love Affair of October and May.

There was a hint of autumn in the woodland tints, where the colors shaded from softest gray green through russet tones to deepest red and brown, and the breeze that swept over the uplands was suggestive of chilly October, but the golden spell of Indian summer lay on the valley, touching the ripe peaches with an added bloom and wooling the late roses to unfold their fragrant hearts before it was too late to give their sweetness to the dying sun.

In the rectory orchard, under the village of the fruit laden trees, village lads and lasses had sought, and in the meadow the children laughed and played and danced to the music of their own voices.

The professor stood at the outer edge of a circle of infant revelers, his spectacles pushed up on his broad forehead, his soft Homburg hat tilted forward to shield his eyes from the sun.

Gray eyes they were, with a keenness in them that was reflective and that lent them a clearer vision for things that had not yet at a distance than for present realities.

The iron gray hair was brushed back and outlined features that were not unattractive, though their sternness gave him a semblance of severity until he smiled.

When the professor smiled children understood that the tall figure with its inclination to stoop was likely to prove aggressive, and that the learning contained in that massive frame could be put aside with the spectacles; also that the professor might have been a young once, before the weight of a laura wreath had puckered his brows and powdered his hair with the frost that came before winter.

He was smiling now and looking with appreciative interest at the game in progress.

"Do you hear what they are singing?" he asked the rector's wife.

Mrs. Errington detached herself from the ten urn to answer carelessly, "Nuts and May, isn't it?"

"The delightful irrelevance of childhood," pursued the professor, "the sublime truth in the impossible. 'Here we come gathering nuts and May—so early in the morning!' Not content with demanding their autumn and their spring at the same time, they have now come to the middle of summer, all the world at their feet, with youth to make them enjoy it. They have faith to remove mountains, but I am afraid the days of miracles are past."

Mrs. Errington's glance lingered on him for a moment, and then he trudged to where a girl in a white dress stood under the trees that bordered the rectory garden.

"There is Evadine," she said; "how fresh and cool and sweet she looks down there, like a professor."

He adjusted his spectacles to give a connoisseurish answer.

"Miss Evadine is always pleasant to look at," he said, as he gazed with a penetrating air in her direction; "at this distance I do not see her so plainly as I could wish."

"And she is always pleasant to talk to," added Mrs. Errington; "go and ask her if she would like some tea, professor."

A Men Hunt.

An English paper says that the test of a certain object is whether at Eton boy off one day, and as he started in pursuit a black bear dashed out of the gateway. The schoolmaster saw the bear and thought it was his hat, and all Eton was electrified by the spectacle of a batless and breathless reverend man hunting a black bear from one end of the street to the other.

The executive of the Presbyterian Century Fund has decided to engage a agent to care for all the contributions in the church. The $100,000 needed from the members of the church will, it is expected, be realized before long.

"I am sent to ask you if you will help me to get a man," he said.

"What is that meant for an excuse or an apology?" asked Evadine demandingly.

"Does my errant need either?" he questioned in return, with his usual gravity.

"You seemed to consider so," said she, "in which, if you will not think me conceited, I will confess you are unusual. There are people," she continued, noting his puzzled air, "who come and talk to me without any regard at all—merely for the pleasure of the thing."

A little smile was playing round her mouth, and through her curved eyelashes the sparkle of her eyes meant mischief.

The professor pushed his spectacles up again; when people were close to him he could see better without assistance.

"There are people," he said, "who might venture to come to you, on their own merits. Miss Eva, I am not one of those fortunate few."

"No," she quiered, lifting her eyebrows, "you're your merits are by no means insignificant. They are public property, professor, and we are very proud of them down here. I have even—she looked away from him—felt a little alarmed at the thought of them sometimes and wondered whether we all seemed very stupid and dull to so learned a person as you."

"Stupid and dull!" He echoed the words involuntarily, while he was thinking what a dainty outline the contour of her cheek must make—like a pink rosebud, and with a singularly sweet intonation she had.

KIDNEY CURE

WHEN THE GIRLS WORE CALICO.

There was a time, betwixt the days of Linsey, woolsey, straight and prim, And now, when girls are in the world, They're in calico.

Leads woman captive at its whim, Yet not a hundred years ago, When girls were gowned in calico.

Within the base by lantern light,

Through many a room, with flying feet,

To addled measures, shrilly sweet,

And merry revels were, though

The girls were gowned in calico.

Across the flooring rough and gray,

The girls in scarlet chintz was spread,

And the forest of crimson lace,

That strangled off the lass's head,

Swung scented frits to and fro

O'er pretty girls in calico.

They used to go a-Maying then,

The blossoms of the spring to seek,

And girls in gaudy gowns,

Unweighed by fashion's latest freak,

And Robin fell in love, I know,

With Phyllis in her calico.

A tuck, a frill, a bias fold,

A flat curved over-gimped lace,

And ruffles and ruffles and gold,

And roses and merry eyes

Made lasses in that long ago

Look charming in their calico.

Modern knight who loves a maid

Of grace and gentle grace,

And with her she'll be a knight,

In shining silk and precious lace

Will love her just as well, I know,

In pink and blue calico.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hamilton, Ont., had had a fitful deliverance from a frightful death.

In telling of it he says: "I was taken with Typhoid Fever. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to die, but I recovered. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvelous medicine is the most rapid and quickest cure in the world for Typhoid and Lung Trouble. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. G. Egan's Drug Store; every bottle guaranteed.

ALONG THE LAKES.

The most alarming situation that has ever occurred in the present century with regard to lake freight traffic exists as a consequence of the wrecking of the Douglas Houghton, a magnificent steel freighter, which came to grief in St. Ignace River by a collision with a heavily laden barge.

The barge swung round and struck the Houghton in the side. The iron-freighted boat sank in a few minutes. The ship is now on the bottom of the water, and it is at this point so shallow that it constitutes an effective blockade.

The Douglas Houghton belongs to the Bessemer line. She was launched at the Globe yards, Cleveland, a few weeks ago, and is one of the two largest freighters on the lake. Her owner is the Samuel Morse, her sister ship. She is 476 feet long. Her cost was over $300,000. This trip down was her third trip, and she was loaded with 4,000 tons of ore. The Manitou grano which has severely delayed her, which has caused the outgoing ocean steamers at Montreal. The loss in this particular alone will be very heavy, every one of the great fleet of boats above the blockade is rendered useless.

The blockade is rendered useless, however, as the iron freighters are rapidly piling up at the Soo, awaiting that event. The blockade was broken on Sunday night by the use of dynamite on the rocks around the Houghton and the big steamer was swinging around so that vessels could pass through the channel.

HOMEMADE ICE BOX.

SIMPLE MAKESHIFTS FOR COMFORT IN THE HEATED TERM.

Two Easitly Acquired Food Coolers which Do Very Good Work—One is Evolved From a Dry Goods Box, the Other From an Old Bureau.

Many families in the country have a supply of ice for dairy or other purposes, and would be glad to make use of this ice in keeping the food cool and fresh were it not for the expense of procuring a refrigerator, while many city and village residents would be glad to take ice from the ice man during the hot weather were it not for this same expense. In view of these facts The Ladies' World makes a timely suggestion of two simple makeshifts that are easy of acquisition, and that, while not "keeping" the ice as well as the regular refrigerators, will still do very good work.

The ordinary homemade refrigerator or ice chest is depicted usually as made of two or three boards, with a partition of packing of sawdust between. It is a tedious job to fit up a "cooler" in this way, while nearly as good results can be secured much more easily. The ordinary ice chest is inconvenient, since all the food and the racks or shelves must be removed every time ice is put in or a lump of ice sought for the water pitcher.

For the refrigerator illustrated by Fig. I select a dry goods box of the size desired and remove the lower part of one end, hinging the board or boards to this end, the food racks being utilized.

Fig. II—Illustrating a simple form of the hinged end and hinging the cover of the box to the top. Instead of having two boxes with packing between, the heat is kept out of the interior by covering the whole box with a thick woolen blanket, this being easily rolled back when the cover is to be raised. The interior racks for food can be arranged to suit one's needs.

About many a home is an old, unused bureau. This will make a very convenient makeshift refrigerator. Cut openings in the bottoms of the drawers, as shown in the diagrams, Fig. 2, and set in the pan of ice in the upper drawer. The food is placed in the other drawers below. A thick woolen blanket does duty here also in keeping out the heat.

The top of both these devices has been cut to fit over the top of the box and the bureaux, so that when in place the outer ends of the tubes will be without the box and bureaux. In the case of the latter a hole will have to be bored in the back of the upper drawer and in the back of the bureau also.

ON STAINS.

Women who travel much are frequently find their skirts spotted with a train oil, and bicyclists suffer similarly from a too generous lubricating of their chain. Cold water and soap are said to be much more effective for removing traces of this sort of accident than the more usual application of hot water, as that is quite likely to "set" the grease.

CUCUMBERS a la PARISIENNE.

For the cucumbers rather thick and let them lie in ice water. Shortly before serving cut lengthwise into four or six portions, according to the size of the cucumber. Arrange upon an oblong dish and cover with French dressing. Pass with the fish course, says Good Evening.

NOTES FROM THE JEWELERS' CIRCUS.

A fad from Paris has appeared among the jewelers. It is the link chain to which beads, nails and various other devices are suspended. This new article of jewelry is known as "La Valloire" and will prove a great summer novelty.

Many novelties are presented in shirt waist sets, consisting of sleeve links, three studs and a collar button. Quite unique is the representation of an ordinary flat button with four holes, each hole, however, being set with a brilliant.

Some women are fastening their silk waist sets with small stickpins of different metals, with "precious stones." Three or four of these make a very pretty color effect on a white waist.

Exceedingly attractive among placings are those of gold wire supports, a single rosebud carved from pink coral.

AN UNCONSCIOUS ALLY.

All's Fair In War and In Love, Especially In Love.

I have always had a remarkably large number of friends of my own sex. Least this should lead people to give me an undue amount of credit for amiability and sweetness of disposition I may as well state at once that I have no marriageable brother.

Being possessed also of a fair amount of brains, I was never for a moment deceived as to the nature of the affection lavished upon me by most of my female friends. But when my dearest cousin, the girl I really thought loved me for myself alone, told me she was engaged to be married to my brother Fred my grief and anger knew no bounds.

I had gone over to stay all night with Maud and had laid awake till 3 a.m. exchanging confidences, and all the time the sweet never said a word about Fred. At last I dropped off to sleep and was just in the midst of a glorious dream, in which I was leading the cotton with a magnificent man who would not let me go. I could see no figures when Maud suddenly threw her arms about my neck, entirely shutting off my wind and searing me almost into nervous prostration, and with a burst of tears confessed that she had been keeping a secret from me for two whole days and that we were to be really, truly sisters, not just sisters in affection, as heretofore, etc.

I managed to wriggle out from under Maud's arms and then I sat up in bed and said things. I don't remember exactly what they were, but they must have been pretty bad, for Fred didn't speak to me for a week (or course Maud had to tell him), and Maud herself went around looking like a suffering martyr whenever we chanced to be under the same roof.

I was convinced that I was the most miserable girl in the world after that, and the worst of it was that everybody, including Maud herself, thought that I was only mad because she was engaged first, an imputation which I indeed not say was entirely unjust.

I'm sure I could not see what Maud had done that was so wonderful anyway. Fred is anything but brilliant, and I never considered him even good looking, while as long as manna lives he hasn't a penny to his name, except his salary, which is by no means princely.

But Maud! You'd have thought she'd kinned a Vanderbilts or poet laureate the way she acted.

I pretended not to notice her airs and nursed my grief in proud silence, but I had no doubt that she was the most conceited and unhappy creature that ever lived until subsequent events taught me that our affairs are arranged by all wise Providence in heaven we may safely trust, no matter how dark our way may seem at the time. I shall never doubt the wisdom of Providence again.

To begin with, I found I was likely to get a lot of amusement out of this engagement. Fred was madly jealous of Maud all the time though any one who could see half an eye that she was simply mad about him and in deadly fear of losing him herself.

He would come home at least three times a week, poor, haggard and wild eyed, with a great thirst. The rest of the time he was madly joyful and talked about Maud as if she was several degrees higher than the serpent. It was enough to make a St. Bernard dog laugh just to see him.

I also found further consolation in the fact that his state of mind interfered seriously with Fred's appetite, that I got all the extra padding and things that had always failed to his share. (Fred was always a greedy thing, and then Perceval Jones came from abroad.)

Perceval was a millionaire's son, with a face too beautiful for words and a taste for fables.

Of course all this made him desirable beyond most other men, but I must say the way the girls of Archerville made different kinds of fools of themselves about him was enough to disgust even a woman's rights advocate with her sex.

I need hardly say that I was smart enough to treat Mr. Jones with marked coolness. The first time I met him my behavior seemed to puzzle the temperate youth. The second time he was received distinctly grudgingly. On the third he asked permission to call, and I went home at peace with all the world, even Fred.

For five consecutive afternoons after that I sat by the tea table in the back drawing room, attired in my best gown, and in a general revel-in vain.

On the sixth he came in.

"What a delightful surprise," I said gushingly. "I was a tribe nervous from waiting so long."

"Ah, thanks!" he remarked, looking dismally.

And then mamma came in and in spite of my previous warning I ed her about Arthur Jones, so much that rest and sleep impossible. I have used Skinner's Balsam of Aniseed afford instant relief.

This is my only remedy except to our Balsam.

A Pioneer's Story.

WILLIAM HEMSTREET'S HEALTH
RENEWED AT SEVENTY.

HE WAS AFFLICTED WITH ILLNESS FOR A LONG PERIOD, AND THOUGHT HIS DAYS OF USEFULNESS WHILE PAST. HE IS AGAIN AS HEARTY AND ROBUST AS HE WAS TWENTY YEARS AGO.

No man is better known to the people of this country than William Hemstreet, a pioneer and much esteemed resident of Arden, Mr. Hemstreet is a native of this country, having been born in Franklin township in 1817. In his younger days Mr. Hemstreet was engaged in business. He subsequently engaged in the driving and butchering business, and some twenty-five years ago, owing to his superior knowledge and experience, he became the bookkeeper for a license as an auctioneer. In this calling he became at once popular and he was constantly on the road, driving in all kinds of weather, holding auctions several days a week. Although possessed of a strong, healthy physique, the continued exposure and hard work of selling some days for six or eight hours at a stretch, he gradually lost his strength and vigor, and about three years ago found himself in a condition of semi-invalidism.

In the afternoon I telephoned to Maud and asked her to go with me to the golf links at 4 o'clock. Then I telephoned to Fred to meet us there and proceeded to make a fetchet with a light heart. When we reached the links there was Mr. Jones the lad mentioned that was Fred's boy.

He was looking bored, as usual, but cheery and golden.

I studied his attempts at conversation, however, and threw Maud in his way whenever I could.

I was rewarded by seeing him seat himself by Maud's side and commence a disquisition on Ibsen as Fred came around the hill on his bicycle.

No sooner did Fred's eye light on the companion than he commenced to glare like a madman, and in spite of my innocent efforts to keep him away he wound up by being so outrageously rude to Mr. Jones that that gentleman was confounded, and Maud went home in tears.

As for me, I went to bed happy. My pain was working to a charm.

A day or two later I got mamma to ask Mr. Jones to dinner and managed to have him take Maud out. That settled it. Fred treated Perceval in such an insulting manner that even he could hardly overlook it, and he left early, to Maud's distress and my secret joy.

After that I began to meet Perceval every time I went out of the house. No matter whether I walked or drove or rode a wheel I was sure to encounter him before long, and he would always on my way, leaving me always on our return at the end of the street leading to our house.

"Since your brother, who is your guardian, dislikes me so, I cannot go to your house," he would say regretfully, and I would blush and stammer to answer. "But I will see you in spite of him." Perceval would add with a smiling glance, and I would go home in the seventh heaven.

At last after three weeks of this surreptitious courtship Perceval could stand it no longer.

"Be my wife, Rosamond!" he cried one day. "Never mind what they say at home. I must have you. I never knew what love was before."

Poor boy, he had never known the bliss of trying for what he wanted. Before this it had always dropped into his lap.

But I couldn't trust him even then. "Oh, no!" I said timidly. "I dare not. Fred would kill you if he thought of such a thing."

"Let me try," said Perceval valiantly. "I will have you in spite of him. See, he is the minister on his porch, Rosamond. Come, darling, he will give me the right to claim you from your brother."

And before I knew what I was about I found myself in the minister's parlor being married in a bicycle skirt and pink cotton shirt waist.

Ten minutes later I walked into Fred's office, leaving Perceval waiting outside, looking a little pale about the gills, but with a combative gleam in his eye.

"Fred," I remarked coolly as I looked my brother square in the face. "I thank you for what you've done for me. I'm Mrs. Perceval Jones, by your leave."

Then a smile of incredulous relief spread over his face.

"Gosh!" he ejaculated. "To think that the fellow actually wanted you!"

A Fowl That Won a Battle.

A singular story is told of a gallant cock whose moral influence at a critical moment during the battle of St. Vincent helped to save a British army from the hands of the enemy.

The battle was fought in the afternoon of the 14th of November, 1805, and the British army formed part of the live stock of the French, a vessel which had suffered so severely that her captain was considering his ability of striking his flag. The ship was entirely dismasted, while the chief officers had been carried below severely wounded, and the crew without anybody to cheer them up, were hardly able to respond.

At this emergency a shot struck the cock whose comb and crest were copious, the only surviving cock in the cock-pit, and finding himself at liberty, fluttered up and perched himself on the stump of the mainmast and surveyed the scene of carnage around him. Then, flapping his wings in defiance, he began to crow vociferously. He was answered by the crew, who at last had a good laugh, and with spirits thus renewed, continued the action with a vigor that defied all a turn in the battle reduced them from about a thousand to four hundred.

Perceval was a millionaire's son, with a face too beautiful for words and a taste for fables.

Of course all this made him desirable beyond most other men, but I must say the way the girls of Archerville made different kinds of fools of themselves about him was enough to disgust even a woman's rights advocate with her sex.

I need hardly say that I was smart enough to treat Mr. Jones with marked coolness. The first time I met him my behavior seemed to puzzle the East of Chicago Does't Count.

It was the metropolis of Chicago in 1877 when it was in its infancy. Now it is indeed the frontier city of the middle west. From the point of view of Omaha and Denver it seems to all the eastern horizon and shut out the further view. Many stories are told to show how absolutely and instinctively your true man is when he comes to the city.

He is a little girl who came into the smoking car of a train somewhere in Kansas or Nebraska and stood beside her father, who was in conversation with another man. The father put his arm around her and said to his companion: "She's been a great little girl of mine. She's only 10 years old and she's been all over the United States."

"She's don't say?" replied the other.

"Yes, sir, all over the United States."

"I say, sir, all over the United States," said the proud father, and then added,

"and though the detail were scarcely worth mentioning, 'except cast of Clay & Co.'

Chicago, unfortunately, marks the limit of my wanderings, so I shall return to Europe without having seen anything of the United States, except for a sort of passing glimpse from the tower of the Auditorium.—William Archer in Pall Mall Gazette.

Hair For Violin Bows.

The horse hair used in making violin and other similar bows is imported from Germany. A considerable part of the hair thus imported, however, comes originally from Russia. Horse hair for these purposes is white and black. The black is the hair and the white, the hair which is used for violin bows, because it bites the big strings better. In preparing the hair for use in bowmaking the white hair, used for violin bows, is bleached to bring it to its final whiteness.

The standard violin bow is 29 inches in length; longer bows are made to order. Shorter bows are used by young persons; but the bow commonly seen in the hands of a violin player is 25 inches long. Horse hair for violin bows is imported in various lengths, but mostly in lengths of 26 inches. Hair sufficient for one bow is put together in what is called a hank. There are grades and qualities of the horse hair, but the best is very costly.

A hank of the best white hair can be bought for 20 cents; it might cost 30 cents more to have it put into the bow.

To repair a bass viol bow costs more, the bulk or hair required being greater.

Scalloped Oysters.—Select firm, plump oysters, and scald them evenly and neatly with a pair of sharp scis-

ors. Now, with a needle threaded with pink silk, or for a pink tea, or blue if you wish blue points, work a buttonhole stitch round the scallop. When finished, press carefully on the wrong side with a hot iron.

Shirred Eggs.—Carefully remove the shell from a fresh egg, and hold the white and yolk firmly in the left hand. Now, with a fine needle and thread, gather the material in straight rows about half inch apart. Draw up to the regular fullness and fasten neatly.

DREYFUS' PARDON SIGNED.

Council of Ministers Decided Upon It Tuesday.

Dreyfus Belligerates His Appeal—The Pardon Will Take Effect Shortly—French People Took It Calmly—Believe That Dreyfus Will Be Secretly Sent Away—Death of M. Scheurer-Kestner, First Champion of the Devil's Island Prisoner.

Paris, Sept. 20.—The Council of Ministers, yesterday, decided to pardon Dreyfus. The pardon will take effect in a few days. Dreyfus has relinquished his appeal for a reversal of the judgment of the court-martial.

What "in Principle" Means.—A prominent Frenchman has informed sometimes in semi-official announcements of forthcoming action. It seems to have but slight bearing on the matter, except, perhaps, that it implies the fulfilment of various formalities before the pardon is actually issued. The following is the announcement of the pardon with slight testitiveness. It is not known yet whether the pardon includes amnesties.

People Took It Calmly.

The announcement that Dreyfus was to be pardoned had already been discounted by prophecy, and it was not surprising to every one displayed anywhere along the boulevards when the newsboys can along at about 3.15 p.m.—with the first editions containing the statement that the Cabinet had decided to pardon Dreyfus. The newspapers had said quickly, but there was a rush to them up to the part of the boulevards. Those who bought up the papers sat down in front of the cafes and read the announcement without comment. Everyone expected it, and the detail met with no opposition. The Le Droit of the Right of Man, Socialists, organ of the Quat'sous, took the same stand as before the liberation of Dreyfus, to continue the campaign against all those who are responsible for the intentinal affair.

It is stated that Dreyfus will be sent abroad before the promulgation of his pardon, in order to avoid demonstrations.

Up to 6 o'clock last evening the utmost calm prevailed throughout Paris. The decision of the Cabinet to pardon Dreyfus was to have passed unnoticed. The only remark heard was, "We expected it."

The official announcement was made in the form cabled to the Associated Press, in order to avoid demonstrations of any kind at Rennes and in Paris. But the pardon of Dreyfus was not merely announced but was actually signed yesterday morning. Measures have been taken in Rennes in connection with it and it will have a good effect generally.

May Go to England.

The newspapers now publish the first official announcement of the Cabinet's decision without comment.

The Journal des Débats, however, says: "We are assured that the family will receive an order for Dreyfus to leave Rennes unperceived very likely, during the night time. The Government does not know, or, in my case, does not say, where Dreyfus is going."

The Journal des Débats, however, follows the foregoing with the report that Madame Dreyfus has taken a train to Kent, near Dover, England. This report has been denied, but many believe Dreyfus will go to England on his release.

Rennes People Excited.

Rennes, Sept. 20.—The news that the Council of Ministers had decided to pardon Dreyfus was received here with intense excitement. Dreyfus is still a prisoner.

Already Out of Prison.

London, Sept. 20.—The Rennes correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, writing at 9 o'clock last evening,
says: "There is reason to believe that Dreyfus is already out of prison and that with his wife, he will probably leave Rennes to-night."

M. SCHEURER-KESTNER DEAD.

Former Vice-President of the French
Senate and Dreyfus Champion.

Paris, Sept. 20.—M. Scheurer-Kest-ner, the former vice-president of the Senate, and champion of Dreyfus, is dead.

M. Auguste Scheurer-Kestner, the former vice-president of the French Senate, and champion of Dreyfus, was born Feb. 11, 1838, at Mâcon, France, from which place the Boer family also handed. He was president of the Chemical Society of Paris, and was a prominent member of other societies.
He was political director of the Bordelais Francaise from 1879 to 1882, and was a member of the improvement of the working classes, and in 1865 founded a cooperative society for their benefit.
His republican views in 1867 caused him to be sentenced to 60 months imprisonment and to 600 francs fine. He was elected to the National Assembly in 1871, and in 1875 he was first elected to the Senate, of which he afterwards became one of the secretaries, and eventually one of the vice-presidents. He was defeated for re-election as vice-president Jan 13, 1898. He has written extensively on chemistry.

Guerin Has Surrendered.

Paris, Sept. 20.—At 4 o'clock this morning M. Guerin promised to surrender. The Boers had "considerable military action" in the course of the battle throughout the night.

The French Conspiracy Trial.

Paris, Sept. 20.—It is expected that the work of the High Court's investigating Committee, appointed to examine into the charges of conspiring to change the form of Government, brought against M. Dero-ude and others, will take from four to six weeks. When the task is completed the High Court (Senate) will re-convene. It is expected its sessions will take up a month.

Now for the Big Show.

Paris, Sept. 20.—President Loupont visited the site of the Exposition of 1900 yesterday and organized the directors to the work to exert themselves to the utmost in order to show to the world in 1900 that France is still a "strong, laborious united nation, whose generous soul is filled with the sense of her mission of progress and peace, and that she had not been peace by fleeing quarrels."

she was 17 years of age when she yesterday. Their train collided with another train at the station. The occupied the rear end of the car they suffered only a severe shock, and proceeded to Balmoral. No one was seriously injured.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Masten Review of the Situation
by Sidney Brooks.

An article in Harper's Weekly by Sidney Brooks thus reviews the Transvaal affair:

It is quite possible that these lines are in print war may have been declared between Great Britain and the Transvaal. On the other hand, though it is still, as I write, a chance, that President Kruger may even now, at something past the eleventh hour, be prudent enough to save his state from wreckage by yielding to Mr.
Chamberlain's demands. One or the other, peacefully or by force of arms, England is determined that the question shall be settled, and settled at once. From her point of view, anything, even war with a stubborn and daring foe, even the risk of setting the whole country south of the Zambezi ablaize, is preferable to allowing the Transvaal any longer to humiliate British subjects and endanger imperial power. In South Africa the Boers see no alternative between making one last supreme fight for independence and being slowly starved out of the rulership of their own land.

The fundamental rights and wrongs
of the dispute have been well-nigh burned in the semi-legal controversies that have raged round the London Convention of 1884. These controversies may be happily passed by. It does not affect the general position of the Boers, but it does affect the position of the Transvaal, vested in the Queen by that chanciest of diplomatic documents amounts to a suzerainty or not. It does not really matter whether Mr. Chamberlain has strict legal right on his side in protesting against the Boers, but the railroads, the dynamite monopoly and the other familiar items of the President's domestic policy, or whether,
under the terms of the Convention, he has no such right. The fact that he does protest is the important thing to know. Convention or no Convention, Great Britain cannot indefinitely let the indications put upon her subjects in the Transvaal, any more than the United States would suffer similar indignity if it were put upon her citizens by a South American republic. The duty of protecting its subjects, however, is one of the chief obligations of a sovereign power. No one would want the Boers to have a free hand, and the newcomers would have dwelt side by side with the old burghers in more or less harmony.

But as things are now, after all these years of petty, irritating persecution, it is difficult to see what the Boers can do but yield. They are not a nation that would have a place in the British Empire. Mr. Chamberlain's proposals, which fell to the ground at the Bloemfontein Conference, which at least have made the transformation
as gradual and inoffensive as possible.
The President rejected them, and on this must the responsibility rest if the way he has chosen is summarily cut in two.

The Boers, it is said, are struggling for liberty, and that is true; but the liberty they are struggling for is the liberty to maintain a medieval oligarchy at the expense of the modern nation. They may sympathize with them in their hopeless struggle against the modern world that is closing in upon them, even while maintaining that the time has come for them to bow or be bent to its will.
They stand and have stood for many years the tutelary power of justice and progress, and must now be rolled out of the way.

Great Britain has waited for them to reform with a patient and self-control that should be a final answer to those who suppose the Boers to be a natural and inevitable part of the British Empire. The Boers have been a thorn in the side of the Empire many years, and it is only now, when their persistent obstinacy has become a danger to British ascendancy in the neighboring colonies that she has resorted to force if the final pressure of diplomacy proves unavailing. The task is not one to be lightly undertaken.

A war with the Transvaal, even if it succeeds no further, will be the most difficult business Great Britain has had in hand since the days of the Crimea. If it extends to Cape Colony and the Orange Free State as easily as it might, it will bring with it a contest in England that has not engaged in since the Napoleonic wars. Nothing but an unwilling conscience of its imperial necessity could force her into it.

of Queen Victoria in England in 1837, and who was one of the old men in Detroit, passed away at the age of 90 years. Interment will

"Taxation without representation was held to justify one great rebellion,
but taxation without representation, taxation
without justice, taxation without polity, without sanitation, without schools, without freedom of the press, without freedom of public meeting, without the protection of the law, is the Boer who has made it so. Had they granted the franchise to the Boers who have made it so, their state would never have been as it is. How they have prospered at the Utlanders and Great Britain by their policy of mistrust and broken promises; that nothing is now open to them but the choice between committing suicide and being murdered.

It is not alone the political rights of a few thousand Englishmen at Joha-whole position of Great Britain in South Africa. The long trinom of the Boers in holding down the English in the Transvaal has created a dangerous solidarity of Dutch senti-

the open humiliation of so many Englishmen on the minds and in

A remarkable test it was performed lately at the Erie basin, Brooklyn, N.Y. The steamer Richmond was on a voyage from Oswego to Bay York when it was found desirable to transfer the vessel to another dock. Four tugs took hold of the floating dry dock and towed it half a mile up the harbor. The 130 men at work on the dock continued at their work with no loss of time.

There is a movement on foot among senators and representatives from the states bordering on the Great Lakes to have a joint Canadian and United States commission appointed to examine into the question of maintaining the levels of the lakes in the interest of navigation. The State Department and the War Department have already considered the question, and some steps have been taken by the latter. The cause of the agitation has been the existence of several movements to control tides at different points along the lakes.

The steamer Glengarry and Bannockburn, both with consorts, left the M. T. Co.'s wharf, Kingston, on Monday, for upper lake ports. At half past 11 o'clock morning the Bannockburn returned with the Glengarry in tow. The latter's machinery had become disabled when near the Ducks, and the Minnedosa, her consort, made sail, got out to a line, and towed the Glengarry to the Ducks, and then to the Mile point, where they were met by the Bannockburn. He was a remarkable steamer, and probably never equalled before. It certainly must have been a novel sight to witness a disabled steamboat being towed by a sailing vessel.

THE PONTON TRIAL.

Commencement of This Cause Celebre at the Cobourg Assizes.

The trial of Wm. H. Ponton, charged with robbing the Dominion Bank at Newmarket, was commenced at the First Assizes at Cobourg on Tuesday. The courtroom, although a small apartment, was not crowded, the people of Cobourg not taking the interest in the trial that was manifested in Napavine. In his opening address for the Crown, B. B. Osler, Q.C., spoke at great length, going minutely into every phase of the case, thus indicating that the Crown was going into the case thoroughly. Forty-nine men were called as jurors and of these a selection of twelve was made.

Henry Baines, who was manager of the Napavine branch of the Dominion Bank at the time the robbery took place, gave a detailed description of the bank building. He said the amount taken was $24,000, and that $10,000 of this was unclaimed $10 in $10 bills. On the morning of Aug. 14 he received a message from Ponton to the effect that the safe could not be opened. An expert from Toronto was sent for and he opened the safe.

On Wednesday morning John Bauch, who was in custody at Napavine, being an accomplice, decided to turn Queen's evidence.

Several witnesses were examined in an effort to locate Paul Holden, Mackie and Mackie at the time the bank robbery took place.

Wm. Holden, the witness confessional, was put on the witness stand. He testified that he met Mackie in the Mountie, where they discussed the proposed robbery. Mackie and witness made arrangements to go to Napavine. The witness was told Ponton wanted to see him. He met Ponton in the Paisley House. Ponton agreed to mark a cross on the safe door where he would enter the safe. Ponton entered the centre bolt of the door entered the safe and then the door was closed, holding Holden to know where to drill when he entered the bank. There was an understanding that Ponton was to leave the key of the back door of the bank underneath the doorknob, and the witness could not find it. Holden and about a second visit to the bank when they were unsuccessful in burhizing it.

The principal witness of the day was John T. Roach, who testified that he entered the Mountie and of his own accord said that he was not and would not prosecute any indemnity from punishment on account of doing so. He said Holden had first intimated to him that the Napavine bank could be robbed without much effort. He described the attempt to burglarize the bank and corroborated the testimony given by Holden in almost every particular. He said Holden had made a key to the safe. The witness spoke of the many plans of the gang, one of which was to hold up Durant, one of the leaders of the gang, but this he abandoned on account of the danger connected with it.

Chief Adams, of Napavine, identified several articles, among them the combination key and the bass key found in the ceiling of Pare's confession.

George Wiles, a tinker, of the village, testified as to the search made of Ponton's room. He had found a deposit slip on which was the impression of a key. The key from which the impressions were made was one which opened Mr. Baines' compartment in the train. The detective said a key could be made from the impression on the paper.

Inspector Givier said a key could be made from such an impression as that on the slip of paper found in Ponton's room.

Mr. McGregor testified to hearing persons in Ponton's room on the night of the bank robbery.

It is expected that the testimony will be in before the end of the week.

ASTOWAWAYSLEUTH

ODD VOCATION OF AN OLD SAN FRAN CISCO BOATMAN.

He Runs His Prey to Water Instead of Land—Latches the Stowaway Get Aboard Ship and How They Generally Come to Griot.

Down by the city's sea wall a queer man pursues a queer vocation. He is a water front "danchester," and his business is the latching of stowaways.

He doesn't run his prey to earth
however, after the manner of other hunters of human game. He runs it to the salt sea.

This weather hardened, wrinkled man is at once the terror and the friend of those who would be stowaways. He is known as Captain Jack, but his name has half a dozen variations, all of which smack of the salt sea. These are some of his altases: Wharf Rat, Water Fowl, Sea Dog, Wunder, Old Man Jack and The Boatman.

His stock in trade consists of his shrewdness in "spotting a stow" and his ability to outwit any old boat which rides the water by night and day through successive seas. The man's attraction to the sea has been Captain Jack's chief success among the masses, figureheads, piers and piles sails, nets, stringers and multitudinous varieties of merchandise that crowd
the bay's edge.

Captain Jack came out of his sea-shell of resile long enough the other day to tell a bit of what he knows about that venturesome creature of chance, the stowaway, who would fain voyage out of port without the previous formality of paying for passenger passage.

"I've been in this business a long time," he said, "an I can generally spot a stow."

The Good Work is Quickly and Surely Begun.

FINED FOR WINNING A CASE.

Was Not Considered Proper to Defend a Horse Thief.

"What I graduated from the law," said
the defendant, "was not to defend a horse, but to defend a man. I did not do so because I had fairly opened my office to defend a man for stealing a horse.
I was not at all aware at the time that the case had been referred by all the other lawyers in town, as defending a horse thief was not a thing to be desired if a man valued his life."

"The case came to trial before an old judge and a jury composed of bewhiskered men. The man was guilty, but he had a number of friends who were willing to swear to anything, and I thought it was my duty to make the best possible use of them. They were all willing to swear that the defendant was 40 miles away from the spot when the horse was stolen, and the prosecution was unable to break down their testimony.

"I then said to the jury, 'I am going to free my client, but it was with a satisfied heart that I saw the room to prepare their verdict.'

"They were back in five minutes, and the old judge asked them if they had succeeded in arriving at a verdict."

"We have," answered the foreman, as he shifted the gun-barrel on his hip.
"We find the defendant not guilty and recommend the defendant's lawyer, even to his youth an innocent, to the service of the court."

"We have been granted for brevity the sum of $500 and a suspended sentence long enough for me to get out of town. It wasn't law, but I didn't stop to argue the matter."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A GREAT WRESTLER.

His Encounter With the Czar and His Noble Reward.

One of the stories of Peter the Great
which are current at the court of St.
Petersburg is of the great czar's wrestling match with a young dragon. Once in the Imperial palace—so the story goes—Peter was at table with a great many princes and noblemen, and soldiers were posted within the hall. The czar was in a joyous mood and, rising, called out to the company:

"Listen, princes and boys! Is there among you one who will wrestle with the czar?" There was no reply, and the czar repeated the challenge.

No prince or nobleman dared to wrestle with his sovereign. But all at once, a young dragon stepped out from the ranks of the soldiers on guard. "I will wrestle with the czar," he said. "I will wrestle with the czar."

"Well, young dragon," said Peter,
"you will wrestle with this, but if you are thrown then shall be beheaded. Will thou wrestle on those conditions?"

"I will, great czar," said the soldier.
They closed, and presently the soldier with his left arm threw the czar and with his right he prevented him from falling to the ground. The sovereign was clearly beaten. The czar offered the soldier whatever reward he should claim, and he ignobly claimed the privilege of drinking free, as long as he lived, in all the inns belonging to the crown. What became of him they do not say.

When the final going has been settled, the warning "All visitors ashore!"

is given, the gangplank withdrawn,
the last rope loosened and the screw turned, the vessel's interior is carefully explored. Meanwhile Captain Jack's weather beaten boat is speedily at its wile. If a stowaway be discovered a signal is sent from the boat's bridge. Captain Jack is quickly alongside. A rope ladder is lowered, and toward it the purser or other officer and his aids escort the discomfited "stow."

"Every day," concluded Jack, "I fetch in men and women that want to git away. They're broke, an thought they'd try their luck in some other place. I lump most of 'em off at McGraw's wharf. It's a heap easier for me to sell the stow. There's more lumber to sell to folks to start.
Some of 'em find a place all right, an some is afterward fished out of the bay. Then they go to the coroner.
A dead man, it seems, is worth more to the city than a live one."

And this is it that the stowaway sooner or later all journey with Captain Jack—soone to begin life all over again, others to lie for a brief time on a marble slab at the moment marked "Undeified."—San Francisco Examiner.

A ROPE OF WORMS.

The Curious Procession That May Be Seen in Norway Forests.

In the deep pine forests of Norway
the woodcutters sometimes find a serpentine object nearly 50 feet long.
They did not know what it was, made of millions of little worms, and might be frightened by its peculiar appearance. These worms called the seaworms, called during July and August in large numbers preparatory to hatching
in search of food or for change of condition. When setting out on a long walk, they sometimes take the seaworms along, as they are a good life preserver.

As the worm is only an average about three-quarters of an inch in length and barely wider than a needle, the number required to compose a line of the size above is enormous.

It is enormous. The pace is very slow and the meeting is obstinate, such as a stick or stone, they will either writh or crawl over it, sometimes breaking into two bodies
for this purpose.

Mr. Guérin-Meneville, a celebrated French naturalist, says that the rear portion of this seaworm is the most venomous part of the animal.

A FARMER'S VICTORY.

RETRIBUTION DEAD—PUNISHED ITS FATHER UPON HIM FOR YEARS AND CAUSED HIM ENDLESS MIRE—TELLS HOW HE FOUND A CURE.

Among the many in this vicinity who firmly believe in the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for rheumatism is John Stewart, of Branttonville. To a representative of the Acadian who recently interviewed him,

Mr. Stewart said he had been a victim to the pangs of rheumatism for upwards of twenty years. Two years ago Mr. Stewart went to the front load of hay and was injured so severely that he was obliged to take to his bed.
While in this condition his old enemy—rheumatism again fastened its talons upon him, the pains radiating from his back, making life almost a burden. He had read frequently in the Acadian of the cure effected through the use of Dr.
Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a trial. At first the use of a few pills did not seem to improve him and his general health began to improve.
Mr. Stewart continued taking the pills until he had used eight boxes,
when the pains had entirely disappeared and another victory over disease had been won by this peerless medicinal.

The Acadian can add that Mr.
Stewart is worthy of every credence as he is a man of intelligence and sterling qualities, whose word is unquestionably accepted by all who know him.

The public is cautioned against numerous pink colored pills. The genuine are sold only in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the words "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." The dealer who does not have this label on his box will be sure to sell them at a high price.

LOOK UP!

Our 'stars to their graves have gone.
Their strife is past—their triumph won.
But stern trials wait the rest,
With a curse on the place—
A mortal warfare with the sense—
And folly of an evil time.So let it be. In God's own might
We give up the coming fight,
And, strong in him whose cause is ours,
In conflict with unyielding power—
We grasp the weapons he has given—
The light and trust and love of heaven.—Whittier.St. Sylvestre.
He Made Up His Mind
Too Late.On the night of the 31st of December
my friend Jacobus, after having dined in silence at the table d'hôte of the Golden Rose, retraced with quick steps Grangefield street, where his bachelor lodgings were.The street was solitary and badly lighted by a faroff gas jet. The north wind, blowing directly between the two rows of black facades, cut Jacobus's face and, notwithstanding the close buttoned overcoat, made our friend feel that the blood of 40 years did not possess the warmth of prime youth.Therefore did he agitate with an impatient hand the hammer which decorated the lady's door.It was the Biaggio of the house, Mlle.
Franceline still gave an attractive pi-quancy to her face, although she was
commencing to fade, having attained
her twenty-eighth year on St. Catherine's day."My thanks!" said Jacobus. "I heard your laughter up stairs, and it made my mouth water. Will you make room for me at your side, Mlle. Franceline?"And then, in sending a tender look toward Franceline, he saw all of a sudden that place was taken. A young man of about 30 years, a forester, was seated at the same bench with the young girl and was very close.With her eyes opened his hand bulging eyes the lady said to him, advancing a chair: "Come near me, M.
Jacobus; I'm going to give you some news. We are killing two birds with one stone. We are feasting the St Sylvestre, and we are toasting the betrothal of our Franceline with M. le Garde General Sandax. Take then, a glass and drink with us. They will be married the 2d of February."—From ards. Above them on a rack are holding a mosquito netting and a mackintosh. The doctor has a large country practice, and he keeps out of town calls."He was not insensible to the blue eyes and to the smile of the young lady, but he was afraid of marriage.

He resembled those children who are about to take a cold bath, who dip one foot in the water, then take it out again and cannot decide to take a final plunge.""Thanks!" said he again on going up the stairs. "No letters have come for you, M. Jacobus, the mail carrier has brought nothing.""Well, decidedly I'm forgotten!" said I thought Jacobus as he put the key in the keyhole. "The entire world has forgotten the way to my house."Jacobus felt himself become, little by little, in a fit of bad temper. This night everything had gone wrong. The log on the fire smoked instead of flaming;
his lamp flickered without giving light;
a dimly lighted wind passed under the door and froze him to the marrow."A man, a doctor, believe," murmured he as he passed the pipe—"his lips that the evening of his birth clung with it." Mine lights very badly, and my cigarette is doused glowing."This weakening of the interior light is one of the fatal consequences of decay. Decay and debility. Two unhealthy muscles which growl and start a lot of bad seed that one thought dead and that bring forth ugly flowers with a bitter-scented remorse, terrible regrets, hesitations and fear of going on.""I'm especially a cowardly man, which keeps me from acting,
which turns one from generous acts,
from all fruitless daring. I remember in the time of my dream, at a moment when I was about to climb an impenetrable cliff of the Pyrenees. I met a man in a room and already bent down, and as I interrogated him as to the road to follow he erred out to me:"Do not climb up there. The road is a veritable foundry. You will get out of breath all to no avail."After this there was another and longer pause. —Yours truly."I shan't get my shoulders and kept on my way, laughing at the foolishness of that middle age, and this is what I have come to! The least pebble disturbs me, the most childish difficulty takes the proportions of an impossibility.
I know no more how to dare or to will, and I retire to my bachelor cell regretting the dream that I let slip at the time when youth durst not in all its freshness."At that moment the echo of young voices came from below, and in this way noise Jacobus could distinguish Franceline's clear laugh."They are amusing themselves down stairs," thought he again, with a sigh.
"They are drinking to the year that is passing and to the one that will be born.""It's them a year that passes away and one that becomes do not awaken mischief thoughts. They are not yet at the age when the weeks and the months seem to go by with the rapidity of a swallow on the wing. They will come to it nevertheless, and to Franceline as well as to the others. She is going on to her twenty-eighth year and has not yet found a husband. Poor girl! Little by little her claws will frail, those blue eyes will lose their brightness, her laugh will change those clear notes for sharp and dry intonations, and she also will know the loneliness of a celibatist, the regret of chances that have flown away and the fear of ripe age. Oh, the old wails! I pity them even more than the old bachelors!""The prison of isolation. And for them more obscure and more narrow.
This world is more severe. The quick blood which courses through their veins will grow up sooner. They must smother its bubbling. Thus charming girls fade away, and that is what will happen to Franceline unless a brave fellow makes his appearance who is loving enough and courageous enough to transplant in a warm medium this poor plant.""But then, miserable one, since thou understand so well all these things,
why art thou not that brave fellow?
Thou art tired of thy frozen foyer.
Why dost thou not make of her a happy and joyous mate?""Ah! There it is, precisely. I do not know any more how to date!"While he was immersed in these black and disenchanted ideas Jacobus was losing the notion of the exterior phenomena. A chill which ran along his back brought him back to reality.
He perceived that his fire was consumed without throwing out any heat, that his pipe had become cold and that that was the reason of his chills. Just as he was about to rise to shut it hermetically now joyous rumors came from the first floor, and new silvery laughter from Franceline struck his ears. He had still a moment of hesitation; then the cold of this December night decided
him. He blew out his lamp and descended, feeling his way down the staircase, and, guided by the laughter, he knocked timidly at the lady's door.It was Mlle. Franceline. The girl was still, looking down at the lighted candle in her hand, which decorated the lady's door. She was holding a bunch of chestnuts, and in the other lamp which lit up her face and her sparkling blue eyes.Those blue eyes, that frizzly
brown hair and the bright smile of Mlle.
Franceline still gave an attractive pi-quancy to her face, although she was

ALONG THE LAKES.

The Two Brothers took a cargo of lumber to Fairhaven.

The schooners Freeman, F. L. Wells and Muskegon lumber to Oswego.

The schooner Pierrot cleared for Charlotte, N. Y., with a cargo of ties and shingles.

Summerville continues to be carried to Bay of Quinte ports by the smaller schooners and sloops.

The steamer Nile made a trip to Clayton, with a cargo of lumber and another to Ogdensburg.

There is more business done at the Deseronto in the way of shipping than a week than at any other point port for a period twice.

Steam barge India brought in two tons of iron ore for the Ross Iron Co., from the Two Harbors, Mich., and cleared light. Her port, the Augustus, brought in 1,203 tons of the same material.

S. Folger, of the Thousand and Steamer Co., is shortly to return to the port of Montreal, the best in the history of that company. More people were carried, and there was not an accident to record for the whole season.

The business of the Sault Ste. Marie can this year show a considerable falling off. This is mainly owing to the fact that the American canal has on the entrance 21 feet of water, while the Canadian has but 16 feet 6 inches. The figures of this and last year's traffic are as follows: (Extracts from Canadian in 1885, 3,048; in 1886, 2,257; gross tonnage of craft passing through in 1885, 2,211,892; in 1886, 2,022,701. The freight carried in 1885 was 2,463,085 tons, as compared with 2,114,981 tons last year.

The schooner W. Y. Emery, Capt. Alexander Mitchell, which left Montreal, Wednesday, went ashore at Beau Creek Tuesday afternoon. The vessel is said to be in a bad position, with a heavy list to port and a high sea running. As soon as the Emery's signals of distress were received, the life-saving station at Charlotte, then sending Proctor and went to the rescue of the crew. They had thrown out the anchors, but the wind and sea still forced the vessel towards the breakers. The life-savers' boat was launched from the Proctor, and with great difficulty all of the distressed crew were taken off and brought back to Charlotte.

A Manxman's Call to Duty.

The Hon. J. K. Ward, of Montreal, a man-Canadian, sends to the Witness his copy of the leading Isle of Man paper containing the following:—

"I see from this week's Christian World that a paper called the Isle of Man is to be published in the Isle of Man by the Rev. G. H. Copeland. Miss Anna May Davis, to Samuel Hicker-son, of Northport.

would have great difficulties to fight with, but I wonder what right any of us would have to call ourselves followers if we did not stand by him and see him through. Now this is not a mere utopian dream. It ought to be perfectly feasible. If our Christian profession is a reality and not a sham, all of us should be a large factor in it. Christian members should be governed by the rule: 'What would Jesus do?' they would make it quite possible for such a paper as the one described as existing in Montreal to live and flourish among us."

August Trade.

"The trade figures of the Dominion for the month of August last were issued by the Department of Customs to-day. "Horatio Bigelow, a rich young Bostonian, son of S. Bigelow, president of the Boston and Montreal Mining Co., died in the entrance of the shopping district. An introduction was secured, Bigelow having fallen in love at sight. When young Bigelow's parents were consulted concerning the marriage the latter demurred, but finally consented, the wedding to take place after young Bigelow had made a trip around the world. The young man got as far as Chicago, when he returned to Boston to meet the lady and they were wed. Bigelow, Sr., is said to be relating:

"A STUNNY ABOUT CHEESE." "Cheese," said some wiseacre long ago, "digests everything but itself." Never was there a greater error perpetuated by a popular proverb. It aids in the digestion of nothing, and, being almost totally indigestible, simply adds another burden to an already overburdened digestive system. The feeling of comfort produced in a person of robust digestive faculties by partaking of a little—a very little—cheese is due entirely to the excitement of the flow of digestive fluid provoked by the ingestion of a completely indigestible substance.—National Druggist.

The demand for fine manufactures of Iron is simply enormous and the smelter at Deseronto is turning out quantity and quality second to none in the world. Iron has gotten into wonderful use as a material for building, it is fast doing away with stone and wood.

For years it has been the great thought of men in this section to find a good ore in our back country. It is there in millions of tons and will be found for years. It has been a great tonic and man builder and will be forever. Blood Iron Syrup is made from the crude iron and is a perfect and beautiful tonic.

SOWING.

Sow thou thy seed of corn and wait awhile.
See the new falling and the ice spray gleam
About his hiding place, the sun is low and dim
And the clouds sweep o'er the miles and miles of sullen landscape. Watch the raincloud's vial Empty above it, and the little rain comes down in drops, and then a team
Of tender green shoot up to greet the smile,
And 'tis God's miracle is wrought once more
Of man's death—from less, most wondrous grief.The camellia glitters with its golden store
Of petals, and the sun and rain
Decorate the batten brown earth, sighing over That but to wait and pray lest fate should wane!Sow thou thy seed of love, O heart, and wait!
Though it lie hidden, though thy doubts and whisper to thee 'tis lost and thy soul tears
On the iron bed of bitter fate.Sow thou thy seed of love, O heart, and wait,
For life will open. See, though hid for years,
Love seeks the light of love! Its tender sprout has burst the earth, and now it grows late,
Even in the pale perchance and not the bloom.
Ofttimes God's seed that love's flower bare
In the perfection this side of the tomb,
Is sown in the earth, and not in the air
Of its sweet paradise; after earth's gloom
Love hath its blossoming, but not, but there!

GEORGE PAUL.

A STORY OF
TWO CIPHERSWhen the Old Man Wrote His Check He Did Not Mixled With His Figures.

By W. R. ROSE.

"I am convinced of the truth of the old adage that 'the tongue is the most dangerous member in the body.' I have heard many a tongue wag in the last days in the sight," said a business man of this city who recently underwent a minor operation for granulated eyelids. "I had to sit for three days in total darkness, and, being a confirmed smoker, I longed for the solace of a cigar. The first difficulty I encountered was in getting a light, and I wouldn't confess my helplessness until I had burned off half my mustache. Then I let my wife hold the match, but I kept complaining that the tobacco wouldn't ignite. My wife would assure me that it was burning like a furnace, but I couldn't taste a thing."

"One of the main pleasures of the habit, although we don't realize it, is to exhale the smoke gently and watch it curl up into the air. I caught myself straining after that sight a hundred times, and there was an overwhelming sense of something missing. Except when I inhaled the smoke it was absolutely impossible to tell whether the cigar was going, so I got some cigarettes and inhaled every one. But it was a poor substitute. I felt instinctively that I was getting only a morsel of the old delight."

"When they took off the bandage, I grabbed my pipe with an avidity that surprised the entire household. I have been trying to catch up ever since."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Struck by the System.

A peddler the other day found himself in an office building occupied wholly by lawyers. He went up to the first flat looking for a customer, but he found all the doors locked. Then he went up to the second flat, and there he found everybody absent, and so at last he went to the top flat. Here he espied an open door, and, looking in, saw a man busy writing at his desk. The peddler began telling of his wares, but the lawyer interrupted with, "No, I don't want any." Still the peddler continued, and again the lawyer protested, "Get out!" But the peddler persisted in telling the lawyer, thoroughly annoyed, quickly arose and threw the intruder down the stairs.

Just as he landed the lawyer's partner appeared, and, taking it for granted that there was good reason for such action, he seized the poor man and threw him down the next flight. Strange enough, the janitor of the building saw the second landing of the peddler, and the fact that he was a peddler was enough to cause him to seize a little tightening about the heart. Dead four and twenty years. Their son was four and twenty, and he married tomorrow. Their son. Had he done his duty by their son? He thought so. He had certainly given him a good schooling. The boy had gone through college with credit to himself and his father and had helped to pay his way too. And old man wanted him to study law, but he had a love for chemistry and, in company with a fellow student, had set up an office of his own. They started in as consulting chemists and assayers and were from all Obdol could learn—building up a fairly remunerative business. He was certainly a good boy, though perhaps a little lacking in that respect for his father which begets confidence. It seemed but a day or two ago that he had come to him and said:

"Father, I am going to marry."

"With whom?" he presently said in his tones.

"I don't know, but I have all settled, why do you come to me?"

"Because I think you should know about it," said Arthur stoutly.

"You didn't think to consult me before you took this step?" said the old man grimly.

"You couldn't expect that, father," said the son. "I—I am no longer a boy. Besides, you can't help but approve of her. She's the dearest girl. Her name is Alma Truman, and her father is a chief accountant with Fawcett & Co., the eldest of six, and they're awfully poor, but I like the idea of her going. That's the kind of girl to marry, father—the kind that is mad at home. But you must know about it."

"How do you expect to support her?" inquired Obdol dryly.

"With these two hands and the excellent education you have given me," replied Arthur.

The boy had taken him around to the Trumans' house one evening, but there were so many Trumans, and it was only a short while, and he had scarcely caught a glimpse of the girl. And now the boy was going to marry and leave him, he felt forever.

Their boy! Had he always remembered that Arthur was their boy? Would things have been different if she had lived? Would he himself have become the dry, old, money making machine he was? God only knew.

How happy they had been that brief year. How ambitious he was for his son. How he toiled and planned. And he remembered how she would come to him and lay her soft, cool, white hand on his shoulder and command him to rest. Was she smiling down on him now as she had smiled down upon him then and as she almost seemed to smile upon him from the lifeless canvas?

Four and twenty years, and here he sat, an old man, preparing a wedding gift for his son. Yes, it was a custom—foolish perhaps. He would give him a check for $100. It was a tidy sum and pretty nearly as much cash as the boy's father had when he married. A hundred dollars! Surely a liberal gift for—for their boy. Their boy!

A LIVELY OLD SHARK

WE MADE RAPID TIME FROM MONTEVIDEO TO PERNAMBUCO.

The Feast Sounds Incredible, but the Orator at the Liars' Club Told a Cremnental Story and Displayed a Souvenir of the Event.

"The speed attained by south Atlantic sharks in their efforts to arrive at desired points within the least possible space of time," said No. 18, who used to be in the navy and is now a clerk in the navy department, addressing the last meeting of the Washington Liars' club, "has long been a subject of scientific investigation. I don't know the exact number of knots they have been found to make within the space of an ordinary four hour watch, but if a south Atlantic shark can't beat an albatross when it comes to speed I'll eat my bag and hammock and dirty box."

"Now, those sharks down in the south Atlantic, that don't like to find themselves too near the equatorial waters, and yet they want to have plenty of room to pounce. They've got the temperature of water that suits them best figured out to a nicely, and they know that on the other side of the equatorial line there's just as good water and water of the same degree of temperature, as that in which they're fooling around when they get to thinking on this subject."

"Well, what do they do when they get to worrying over the cramped spaces in which they find themselves on one side of the line or the other? Why, they just lay a shark across the line. That's all. They know that the equatorial line is a touch of water that's a heap too hot for their constitutions and that they can't stand monkeying around in the water on that line long, and so they just hop over it, lickety cat, so fast that you can't see their fins for dust."

"I remember once, when I was on the old Ticonderoga, a thing happened that gave us a line on the speed of sharks when they take it into their heads to get speedy. We got into the port of Montevideo one morning at 10 o'clock. It was a Monday, April 12. Montevideo harbor is full of sharks, and the men forward got up a ring over the side for them in order to get them to make walking sticks of them. One huge man eater was landed after great difficulty with the combined strength of the whole watch on deck, and he had to be clubbed with belaying pins and Captain bars for an hour before he gave up and cashed in."

"Well, we cut him open, and, gentlemen, what do you suppose we found inside of him? Why, as fine a gold watch and chain as you ever saw in your life! Not an ordinary minute and second hand watch, but one of those watches that give the date, the day of the week, the phases of the moon and the whole thing. Well, sirs, you can imagine our astonishment when we

The Widow.
It is said by an Aitchison cynic that as soon as a woman is a widow she loses all fixness of purpose and can be turned into a harridan as easily as the weathercock on a house. We are not so bold at it, but a woman who has once had a husband to do the deciding is at a disadvantage when she has no one to blare the way.

A Mole Catcher.

A farm manager at Fodderby, Dingwall, Scotland, watching a mole catcher at work, saw six moles hovering over and occasionally alighting upon a turnip field in which the observer and others were at work. A particularly large and handsome mole attracted his attention by the graceful way it darted slowly over the drills, intently scanning the surface of the ground. Suddenly, stodding it a moment, it dropped, dug its bill into the heavy ground and rose with a mole for its prey. Resting a few minutes, it gracefully began again a further search for prey. In a few minutes a second mole was unearthed.

Unvaried Diet.

An amusing story is told of an old time soldier who loved liquor better than food, and was bound to his taste. It was in the days when British soldiers provided themselves with rations out of their pay. To insure the proper feeding of the men a strict inspection of the daily mess was instituted. It was found that unless this was done many soldiers would go without meat in order that they might have money to buy strong beer.
